HOUSE WILL NOT ACT UNTIL MONDAY

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, March 4.—The house of representatives will not act to table the McLemore resolution warning Americans off armed belligerent merchantmen until Monday. This was decided at a conference today between Majority Leader Kitchin, Acting Chairman of the Rules Committee Pou, and Chairman of the Foreign Affairs Committee Flood. They agreed that inasmuch as many of the members of the house, believing that no important business would be transacted today, left the city yesterday and last night, it would be unfair to submit a matter of this magnitude to a depleted house. In consequence it was agreed that the entire discussion would be put over unitl next week.

When the resolutions come to a vote there will be no debate. Previously, however, there will be a lively forty minutes of discussion on the special rule. In anticipation of a renewal on the floor by Representative Fordney of Michigan of the allegation made by Senator Gore that the president in effect was not utterly opposed to war, the executive has written a letter to Representative Gordon of Ohio. This letter is not to be read on the floor unless the war charge is renewed. It is explained that it is a personal and emphatic denial of the Gore allegation and a renewed declaration that nothing the president ever has said could by any method be construed as indicating that he entertains any views but the utmost horror of war.

POMONA GRANGE MEETS.

Well Attended Session Held at Lake Katrine on Friday.

The Ulster County Pomona Grange met at Lake Katrine Friday at the Grange Hall, the session being called to order shortly after the arrival of the 11 o'clock train, by John E. Kraft, master. The reports of the subordinate granges throughout the county were given and nearly all the granges were represented and reported prosperous and growing conditions.

C. C. Hardenburgh, delegate to the state grange at Jamestown, gave an excellent report of the proceedings which was supplemented by the report of Mrs. Edward Young.

An excellent dinner was served by the ladies of Lake Katrine and at the afternoon session five members were admitted to the grange. Following was a stirring address by Mr. Sherman of Columbia county who proceeded to install the officers of the grange in a most excellent manner. Due to the fact that most of these in attendance left on the 4:02 train the interesting program prepared by the lecturer of the grange was omited.

NEARLY $10,000 PAID BY MOOSE

Kingston Lodge Has Been of Great Benefit to its Members—Charter Opened for a Limited Period to New Members.

There was considerable disappointment among a great many men in this city last fall when the open charter under which Kingston Lodge, No. 970, Loyal Order of Moose, had been working was closed. Many who had desired to join, but had been postponing giving in their membership application then were unable to come into the lodge under the open charter. However, now Kingston Lodge, No. 970, Loyal Order of Moose, has again been granted permission to open its charter for a limited period.

Kingston Lodge, No. 970, Loyal Order of Moose, was organized May 8, 1912. Since then it has paid out to its members for sick benefits the sum of 4,700 dollars, and has paid to physicians for medical attendance to members, 3,200 dollars and has paid for death benefits to the relatives of deceased members the sum of 1,400 dollars. Many of its members who had been overtaken by misfortune, hardship or destitution were rendered assistance by the lodge through its charity committee and the members thus saved the humiliation of having their plight and misfortune paraded and brought before the community, and inasmuch as their condition was investigated by the committee before rendering them assistance, they were tlso helped in the proper charitable way, without advertising the fact that they were being granted charity, but assistance given them in a quiet, charitable, fraternal, brotherly way.

Kingston Lodge, No. 970, Loyal Order of Moose, pays its members who are entitled thereto, after they have been members for six months, sick benefits at the rate of seven dollars per week for thirteen weeks, furnishes free medical attendance to such members and their families and pays in accordance with its rules one hundred dollars death benefit for funeral expenses. It is the desire of all lodges of the Loyal Order of Moose to save a brother from being buried in Potter's Field.

Many of the prominent professional and business men of this city are numbered among the members of Kingston Lodge, No. 970, and in opening its charter, Kingston Lodge will not sacrifice "quality" for quantity. It desires its membership to be such that it will be a credit to the organization as well as to the city in which the lodge is located.

Male persons above the age of 21 years and a believer in a Supreme Being, who are of good moral character and in good health and not suffering from any chronic disease and sound in body and mind and able to earn a livelihood are eligible to membership in the order.

Kingston Lodge, No. 970, meets the second and fourth Mondays of each month at 8 p. m. at No. 5 Thomas street.

The next regular meeting of such lodge will be held on Monday evening, March 13, next, at which time the nominations for officers for the succeeding year will be made. At the close of the meeting there will be a social session together with an entertainment at which social session refreshments will be served.

The recruiting of members under the open charter will be in charge of District Director, William F. Tierney, the present secretary of the lodge, No. 8 Smith avenue.

GREAT BITTERNESS IN SENATE DEBATE

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, March 4.—The senate renewed its discussion of the submarine controversy today with many evidences of extreme bitterness. Senator Lodge read a statement furnished him by the British embassy denying specifically that Great Britain during the Russo-Japanese war had warned its citizens not to travel on the armed merchantmen of the belligerents. Senator Hitchcock demanded whether Senator Lodge did not know that Sweden already has warned its citizens not to take passage on armed belligerent merchant vessels. Lodge made no reply and Hitchcock declared that there was ample precedent for action by the United States to warn its citizens not to ake passage on any armed ships.

SCHUHLE MAY BE FORGER'S VICTIM

John W. Kehoe of Poughkeepsie was arrested in New York on Friday charged with grand larceny, preferred against him by the Mutual Life Insurance Company for whom he was agent at Poughkeepsie. It is claimed that he appropriated some of the company's moneys for his own personal benefit and also it is alleged that John Schuhle, the grape juice king of Highland, may prefer a charge of forgery in connection with a note which appeared in a Poughkeepsie bank.

Kehoe made a proposition to Mr. Schuhle in connection with taking out an insurance policy and so far as Mr. Schuhle is concerned he signed an application for a policy. Some time later a Poughkeepsie bank notified him that they held a note for $440 and upon examination the grape juice king declared it a forgery, and an examination will be made into the matter.

District Attorney Traver was consulted by the Dutchess county authorities and as the matter occurred in that county the local authorities have not as yet been involved in the matter.

IMPROVEMENTS FOR WATER DEPARTMENT

Labor-saving Devices and Supply of Chemicals to be Purchased—City Firms Invited to Bid on Proposed Steel Cabinet.

Shortage of chemicals due to the failure of imports from Europe has caused a jump in prices of supplies used in the filtering of city water and at the meeting of the Water Commissioners Friday in the city hall it was decided to make purchases of these at once before prices go any higher. Hypochloride of lime has gone from two cents to 15 cents but through City Chemist Caird it is believed a price half the latter figure can be obtained. Superintendent John H. Harrison was authorized to obtain prices on two tons of the hypo and prices on a similar quantity of sulphate of alumina.

Other purchases authorized include three of the latest time saving devices known for water systems. These are a dipping needle, a sonoscope and a wireless pipe locator and the aggregate cost is $65 to $75. The dipping needle operates something like the old divining rod only more accurately and scientifically, a needle being deflected as it passes over a curb box. Much time is now lost looking for these boxes which often become covered. The sonoscope is an attachment for a house faucet by which existence of small leaks can be learned. The wireless pipe locator saves considerable in digging operations, this device locating service ppes under ground. As these pipes have not always been laid in direct line the superintendent expects consderable saving in labor by this one instrument alone.

Placing of a few poles on the city right of way upon which the New York Telephone Company is to string wires and install a telephone at Cooper Lake was unanimously authorized. The city will buy and place these poles. There is now no telephone connection with Cooper Lake, 18 miles distant.

Placing of a meter at John Lang's market and home at Hunter and Ravine streets was authorized per request of the owner.

On motion of Commissioner William Roach, local business houses were invited to tender bids by March 8, for the proposed steel cabinet for the water office. The resolution, seconded by Commissioner Canfield, also authorizes submission of estimates from makers of steel vaults for the installation of a fireproof vault which is favored as a more satisfactory repository of records.

On motion of Commissioner Canfield, adjurnment was then taken. President Hauck presided at the session an beside the commissioners named, Commissioner Chandler was present.

COUNT VON RATHLOU AND FAMILY TO BE DEPORTED.

New York, March 4.—Count Viggo von Holstein Rathlou, of Copenhagen, with his wife and his stepson, William, twelve, is at Ellis Island, awaiting deportation. The count declares his troubles were caused by relatives of Mrs. Rathlou, who is an American.

"They are keeping us out so my wife cannot get a large sum of money, to which she is entitled," said the count. "They have told the officials that I once was in jail because a time payment clothing house in Portland, Oregon, sued me after a disagreement about a purchase. The story is untrue."

The count, countess and child arrived here about two weeks ago, aboard the Oscar II, Henry Ford's peace ship. Members of the Ford expedition in Copenhagen helped the family reach America, the count said.

Ulster Park Buys Lime.

On Wednesday evening Manager Hook visited the Ulster Park Grange and inasmuch as F. E. Andrews, a representative of the poultry department at Cornell was in this vicinity, he was taken on the trip. Mr. Hook spoke on "Soil Acidity," and pointed out that the sweetening of the soil was necessary to produce good crops of timothy hay, red clover or alfalfa or legume cover crops among fruit and was also necessary in order to promote the development of beneficial nitrogen gathering bacteria in soil and destroy harmful nitrogen destroying bacteria in the soil. The cheapest material for this was lime and enough interest was shown so that before the evening was over nearly enough orders had been taken for a car load of lime. Mr. Andrews gave a clear, concise and logical talk on "Natural and Artificial Incubation and Rearing of Chicks."

At the close of the entertainment games were played and dainty refreshments were served those present. The third birthday of the band was a most enjoyable ffair and will be long remembered by those present.

STANDARD OIL CO. PRICE IS LOWEST

Offers to Furnish Oil and Apply it on Streets at Seven and One-Half Cents a Gallon—Cost 10 Cents Last Year.

The city streets will be oiled again this year, and the greater part of the meeting of the board of public works on Friday afternoon was taken up by representatives of various concerns wishing to sell the city road oil. The matter of purchasing this year's supply was referred to the supply committee. Mayor Canfield presided at the meeting with Commissioners Tammany, Everett, Dederick and Burgevin present.

All of the concerns represented at the meeting quoted prices for their products delivered at Kingston. J. J. Carson of the Standard Oil Company quoted the board 7½ cents a gallon applied. The company agreed to deliver the oil in Kingston and also to apply it to the city streets for that amount per gallon. It was brought out that last year the street department applied the oil to the streets at a cost of about ten cents a gallon. In this connection it should be stated, however, that the Standard Oil Company uses auto trucks while the city has only horse drawn trucks. Last year the city used considerable of the Standard Oil Company's product.

The city also used some of the product of the United States Asphalt Refining Company, and their representative, George L. Whitney, was present at the meeting and quoted a price of 6½ cents a gallon delivered at Kingston. He said that his company does not apply the oil to the street, but that the city would have to do the work the same as it did last year.

F. S. Fleckenstein of the Barrett Manufacturing Company quoted the board .0635 per gallon delivered at Kingston. His company had a proposition of renting an auto truck to the city for spreading the oil at a cost of $35 a day. This rent would include the driver of the truck and his helper and the rental would have to be paid for every working day whether it was clear or stormy. He figured that the truck would apply 8,000 gallons a day to the streets, and that with the rental cost of the truck would make the cost for oil and applying it 10.675 cents a gallon. It cannot be applied to dirt roads.

The main difference between the proposition of the Standard Oil Company and the Barrett Company was that the city if it rented a truck from the latter company would have to pay a rental of $35 a day whether the truck worked or not, while the former company's price covered the cost of oil and the applying of it.

C. Gordon Reel, the president of the New York Blackstone Company, was also present at the meeting and talked over a proposition of the city using some of the product of his company on some of the streets this summer. He called attention to the fact that the product had been used on a part of John street and also on Clinton avenue and on Flatbush avenue.

Plan For Street Department.

Jay Terry submitted a comprehensive plan covering the work of the street department, and his idea of what the department should do. His communication was placed on file.

Bills amounting to $4,434.50 were read and referred to the auditing committee.

Snow Removal.

John J. Linson, the clerk of the board, called attention to a bill of $140.52 for snow removal for the last storm. It was brought out that under a contract the city had with the Kingston Consolidated Railroad Company was to pay one-third of the cost of removal which amounted to $46.84 and the clerk was directed to mail the company a bill for that amount.

After considerable discussion the clerk was instructed to look up the contract and see when it expired. Some of the commissioners favored making the railroad company pay one-half the cost of snow removal.

The board then adjourned.

Borho Withdraws Complaint.

The recent incident at the Mansion House culminated on Thursday in Joseph F. Borho, the bartender at the hotel, making application to have Mrs. Arthur Shuffle arrested charging her with assault in the third degree. This morning Robert G. Groves, representing Mrs. Shuffle, and Frank W. Brooks representing Borho, announced to Recorder Lang in recorder's court when the case was called for trial that it had been settled out of court and asked that the complaint be withdraw. The recorder granted the request and thus ends the incident.

DISASTER IN PARIS MUNITION PLANT

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Paris, March 4.—A French ammunition factory at Lacourneuve, a suburb of Paris, blew up today, the explosion killing and injuring many women and men employed in the manufacture of war munitions. Early reports received at the prefecture of police said that the casualties numbered more than 200 and that all available ambulances were needed at the scene.

Fire broke out in the factory following the explosion in the main plant and other explosions followed as the flames spread to other buildings.

An hour after the first explosion twenty bodies had been recovered from the ruins and more than 125 persons had been taken to Paris hospitals . Fourteen of the first bodies recovered were those of soldiers who had been working in the factory during their convalescence after suffering wounds at the front.

Minister of the Interior Malvy visited the scene and later announced that the disaster was accidental, having been caused by the careless handling of grenades.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, March 4.—After showing moderate gains at the start there were recessions in the stock market this morning but business was wholly unprofessional. Some of the room traders bought at the outset while others put out short lines. Studebaker was in supply from the begining, declining 1⅞ to 136½. American Smelting was also weak, falling ⅞ to 97⅛. Steel Common opened ⅛ higher at 82 and then reacted to 81⅝. Mexican petroleum opened ¼ higher at 98½ and then fell to 97¾. Reading, after an initial gain of ⅜ to 82¾, dropped to 82⅛. At the end of the first fifteen minutes practically everything traded in ranged from fractions to about a point below yesterday's close.

The market closed heavy. A heavy tone prevailed throughout the last hour, the only exception to a declining tendency being Cuban American Sugar which sold at 192, a gain of 8¾ points over yesterday's close. Mexican Petroleum after selling at 100½ reacted to 99½. Alaska Gold Mine was freely supplied, yielding a point to 150. The leading railways showed fractional losses. Marine preferred dropped a point and the same amount of loss was recorded in American Locomotive. Government bonds unchanged; others irregular.

HOUSE WILL NOT ACT UNTIL MONDAY

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, March 4.—The House of representatives will not act to table the McLemore resolution warning Americans off armed belligerent merchantmen until Monday. This was decided at a conference today between Majority Leader Kitchin, Acting Chairman of the Rules Committee Pou, and Chairman of the Foreign Affairs Committee Flood. They agreed that inasmuch as many of the members of the house, believing that no important business would be transacted today, left the city yesterday and last night, it would be unfair to submit a matter of this magnitude to a depleted house. In consequence it was agreed that the entire discussion would be put over unitl next week.

When the resolutions come to a vote there will be no debate. Previously, however, there will be a lively forty minutes of discussion on the special rule. In anticipation of a renewal on the floor by Representative Fordney of Michigan of the allegation made by Senator Gore that the president in effect was not utterly opposed to war, the executive has written a letter to Representative Gordon of Ohio. This letter is not to be read on the floor unless the war charge is renewed. It is explained that it is a personal and emphatic denial of the Gore allegation and a renewed declaration that nothing the president ever has said could by any method be construed as indicating that he entertains any views but the utmost horror of war.

NEARLY $10,000 PAID BY MOOSE

Kingston Lodge Has Been of Great Benefit to its Members—Charter Opened for a Limited Period to New Members.

There was considerable disappointment among a great many men in this city last fall when the open charter under which Kingston Lodge, No. 970, Loyal Order of Moose, had been working was closed. Many who had desired to join, but had been postponing giving in their membership application then were unable to come into the lodge under the open charter. However, now Kingston Lodge, No. 970, Loyal Order of Moose, has again been granted permission to open its charter for a limited period.

Kingston Lodge, No. 970, Loyal Order of Moose, was organized May 8, 1912. Since then it has paid out to its members for sick benefits the sum of 4,700 dollars, and has paid to physicians for medical attendance to members, 3,200 dollars and has paid for death benefits to the relatives of deceased members the sum of 1,400 dollars. Many of its members who had been overtaken by misfortune, hardship or destitution were rendered assistance by the lodge through its charity committee and the members thus saved the humiliation of having their plight and misfortune paraded and brought before the community, and inasmuch as their condition was investigated by the committee before rendering them assistance, they were also helped in the proper charitable way, without advertising the fact that they were being granted charity, but assistance given them in a quiet, charitable, fraternal, brotherly way.

Kingston Lodge, No. 970, Loyal Order of Moose, pays its members who are entitled thereto, after they have been members for six months, sick benefits at the rate of seven dollars per week for thirteen weeks, furnishes free medical attendance to such members and their families and pays in accordance with its rules one hundred dollars death benefit for funeral expenses. It is the desire of all lodges of the Loyal Order of Moose to save a brother from being buried in Potter's Field.

Many of the prominent professional and business men of this city are numbered among the members of Kingston Lodge, No. 970, and in opening its charter, Kingston Lodge will not sacrifice "quality" for quantity. It desires its membership to be such that it will be a credit to the organization as well as to the city in which the lodge is located.

Male persons above the age of 21 years and a believer in a Supreme Being, who are of good moral character and in good health and not suffering from any chronic disease and sound in body and mind and able to earn a livelihood are eligible to membership in the order.

Kingston Lodge, No. 970, meets the second and fourth Mondays of each month at 8 p. m. at No. 5 Thomas street.

The next regular meeting of such lodge will be held on Monday evening, March 13, next, at which time the nominations for officers for the succeeding year will be made. At the close of the meeting there will be a social session together with an entertainment at which social session refreshments will be served.

The recruiting of members under the open charter will be in charge of District Director, William F. Tierney, the present secretary of the lodge, No. 8 Smith avenue.

A man made a purchase in a Strand store the other day and left it lying on the counter. "No, don't bother her. Anybody that could put that over on me before my eyes is entitled to it!"

GREAT BITTERNESS IN SENATE DEBATE

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, March 4.—The senate renewed its discussion of the submarine controversy today with many evidences of extreme bitterness. Senator Lodge read a statement furnished him by the British embassy denying specifically that Great Britain during the Russo-Japanese war had warned its citizens not to travel on the armed merchantmen of the belligerents. Senator Hitchcock demanded whether Senator Lodge did not know that Sweden already has warned its citizens not to take passage on armed belligerent merchant vessels. Lodge made no reply and Hitchcock declared that there was ample precedent for action by the United States to warn its citizens not to ake passage on any armed ships.

SCHUHLE MAY BE FORGER'S VICTIM

John W. Kehoe of Poughkeepsie was arrested in New York on Friday charged with grand larceny, preferred against him by the Mutual Life Insurance Company for whom he was agent at Poughkeepsie. It is claimed that he appropriated some of the company's moneys for his own personal benefit and also it is alleged that John Schuhle, the grape juice king of Highland, may prefer a charge of forgery in connection with a note which appeared in a Poughkeepsie bank.

Kehoe made a proposition to Mr. Schuhle in connection with taking out an insurance policy and so far as Mr. Schuhle is concerned he signed an application for a policy. Some time later a Poughkeepsie bank notified him that they held a note for $440 and upon examination the grape juice king declared it a forgery, and an examination will be made into the matter.

District Attorney Traver was consulted by the Dutchess county authorities and as the matter occurred in that county the local authorities have not as yet been involved in the matter.

IMPROVEMENTS FOR WATER DEPARTMENT

Labor-saving Devices and Supply of Chemicals to be Purchased—City Firms Invited to Bid on Proposed Steel Cabinet.

Shortage of chemicals due to the failure of imports from Europe has caused a jump in prices of supplies used in the filtering of city water and at the meeting of the Water Commissioners Friday in the city hall it was decided to make purchases of these at once before prices go any higher. Hypochloride of lime has gone from two cents to 15 cents but through City Chemist Caird it is believed a price half the latter figure can be obtained. Superintendent John H. Harrison was authorized to obtain prices on two tons of the hypo and prices on a similar quantity of sulphate of alumina.

Other purchases authorized include three of the latest time saving devices known for water systems. These are a dipping needle, a sonoscope and a wireless pipe locator and the aggregate cost is $65 to $75. The dipping needle operates something like the old divining rod only more accurately and scientifically, a needle being deflected as it passes over a curb box. Much time is now lost looking for these boxes which often become covered. The sonoscope is an attachment for a house faucet by which existence of small leaks can be learned. The wireless pipe locator saves considerable in digging operations, this device locating service pipes under ground. As these pipes have not always been laid in direct line the superintendent expects considerable saving in labor by this one instrument alone.

Placing of a few poles on the city right of way upon which the New York Telephone Company is to string wires and install a telephone at Cooper Lake was unanimously authorized. The city will buy and place these poles. There is now no telephone connection with Cooper Lake, 18 miles distant.

On motion of Commissioner William Roach, local business houses were invited to tender bids by March 8, for the proposed steel cabinet for the water office. The resolution, seconded by Commissioner Canfield, also authorizes submission of estimates from makers of steel vaults for the installation of a fireproof vault which is favored as a more satisfactory repository of records.

On motion of Commissioner Canfield, adjournment was then taken. President Hanck presided at the session and beside the commissioners named, Commissioner Chandler was present.

COUNT VIGGO VON HOLSTEIN RATHLON.

New York, March 4.—Count Viggo von Holstein Rathlou, of Copenhagen, with his wife and his stepson, William, twelve, is at Ellis Island, awaiting deportation. The count declares his troubles were caused by relatives of Mrs. Rathlou, who is an American.

"They are keeping us out so my wife cannot get a large sum or money, to which she is entitled," said the count. "They have told the officials that I once was in jail because a time payment clothing house in Portland, Oregon, sued me after a disagreement about a purchase. The story is untrue."

The count, countess and child arrived here about two weeks ago, aboard the Oscar II, Henry Ford's peace ship. Members of the Ford expedition in Copenhagen helped the family reach America, the count said.

SAUGERTIES.

Saugerties, March 4.—Upon information furnished by Adelbert Van Horn, confined in the Ulster county jail at Kingston, Sheriff Shultis, Officer Ricketson of Saugerties and Constable Elwyn of Woodstock were at High Woods yesterday making further investigations as to the recent robberies that have occurred in that vicinity. Ulster Park Buys Lime.

On Wednesday evening Manager Hook visited the Ulster Park Grange and inasmuch as F. E. Andrews, a representative of the poultry department at Cornell was in this vicinity, he was taken on the trip. Mr. Hook spoke on "Soil Acidity," and pointed out that the sweetening of the soil was necessary to produce good crops of timothy hay, red clover or alfalfa or legume cover crops among fruit and was also necessary in order to promote the development of beneficial nitrogen gathering bacteria in soil and destroy harmful nitrogen destroying bacteria in the soil. The cheapest material for this was lime and enough interest was shown so that before the evening was over nearly enough orders had been taken for a car load of lime. Mr. Andrews gave a clear, concise and logical talk on "Natural and Artificial Incubation and Rearing of Chicks."

WHATSOEVER CELEBRATION.

Third Anniversary Observed Appropriately at Presbyterian Church.

The third anniversary of the Whatsoever Band of the Rondout Presbyterian Church was appropriately celebrated on Friday afternoon at the chapel with an entertainment and social. The mothers of the members of the band were the guests of honor. During the afternoon games and music were enjoyed and a feature of the occasion was the beautiful lighted birthday cake.

During the afternoon the members of the band rendered a pleasing entertainment which was opened with a piano solo by Eleanor Reading and followed by an acrostic "The Whatsoever Band" given by fourteen of the little girls. "A Lesson in Domestic Science" was given by Sarah LeFevre and Dorothy Beeres. The program was brought to a close with another piano solo by Iva Finley.

At the business meeting the following officers were elected to serve this year: President, Elizabeth Brown; first vice president, Sarah LeFevre; second vice-president, Greta Linkletter; treasurer, Anna Rodie; and secretary, Ruth Scott.

The Whatsoever Band was first organized three years ago by Mrs. Irving W. Scott and it is due to her work as superintendent that it has met with such success while the prospects for the ensuing year are very bright. The members of the band all take an active interest in the organization and it is in a flourishing condition.

At the close of the entertainment games were played and dainty refreshments were served those present. The third birthday of the band was a most enjoyable fair and will be long remembered by those present.

STANDARD OIL CO. PRICE IS LOWEST

Offers to Furnish Oil and Apply it on Streets at Seven and One-Half Cents a Gallon—Cost 10 Cents Last Year.

The city streets will be oiled again this year, and the greater part of the meeting of the board of public works on Friday afternoon was taken up by representatives of various concerns wishing to sell the city road oil. The matter of purchasing this year's supply was referred to the supply committee. Mayor Canfield presided at the meeting with Commissioners Tammany, Everett, Dederick and Burgevin present.

All of the concerns represented at the meeting quoted prices for their products delivered at Kingston. J. J. Carson of the Standard Oil Company quoted the board 7½ cents a gallon applied. The company agreed to deliver the oil in Kingston and also to apply it to the city streets for that amount per gallon. It was brought out that last year the street department applied the oil to the streets at a cost of about ten cents a gallon. In this connection it should be stated, however, that the Standard Oil Company uses auto trucks while the city has only horse drawn trucks. Last year the city used considerable of the Standard Oil Company's product.

The city also used some of the product of the United States Asphalt Refining Company, and their representative, George L. Whitney, was present at the meeting and quoted a price of 6½ cents a gallon delivered at Kingston. He said that his company does not apply the oil to the street, but that the city would have to do the work the same as it did last year.

F. S. Fleckenstein of the Barrett Manufacturing Company quoted the board .0635 per gallon delivered at Kingston. His company had a proposition of renting an auto truck to the city for spreading the oil at a cost of $35 a day. This rent would include the driver of the truck and his helper and the rental would have to be paid for every working day whether it was clear or stormy. He figured that the truck would apply 8,000 gallons a day to the streets, and that with the rental cost of the truck would make the cost for oil and applying it 10.675 cents a gallon. It cannot be applied to dirt roads.

The main difference between the proposition of the Standard Oil Company and the Barrett Company was that the city if it rented a truck from the latter company would have to pay a rental of $35 a day whether the truck worked or not, while the former company's price covered the cost of oil and the applying of it.

C. Gordon Reel, the president of the New York Blackstone Company, was also present at the meeting and talked over a proposition of the city using some of the product of his company on some of the streets this summer. He called attention to the fact that the product had been used on a part of John street and also on Clinton avenue and on Flatbush avenue.

Plan For Street Department.

Jay Terry submitted a comprehensive plan covering the work of the street department, and his idea of what the department should do. His communication was placed on file.

Bills amounting to $4,434.50 were read and referred to the auditing committee.

Snow Removal.

John J. Linson, the clerk of the board, called attention to a bill of $140.52 for snow removal for the last storm. It was brought out that under a contract the city had with the Kingston Consolidated Railroad Company was to pay one-third of the cost of removal which amounted to $46.84 and the clerk was directed to mail the company a bill for that amount.

After considerable discussion the clerk was instructed to look up the contract and see when it expired. Some of the commissioners favored making the railroad company pay one-half the cost of snow removal.

The board then adjourned.

Borho Withdraws Complaint.

The recent incident at the Mansion House culminated on Thursday in Joseph F. Borho, the bartender at the hotel, making application to have Mrs. Arthur Shuffle arrested charging her with assault in the third degree. This morning Robert G. Groves, representing Mrs. Shuffle, and Frank W. Brooks representing Borho, announced to Recorder Lang in recorder's court when the case was called for trial that it had been settled out of court and asked that the complaint be withdraw. The recorder granted the request and thus ends the incident.

DISASTER IN PARIS MUNITION PLANT

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Paris, March 4.—A French ammunition factory at Lacourneuve, a suburb of Paris, blew up today, the explosion killing and injuring many women and men employed in the manufacture of war munitions. Early reports received at the prefecture of police said that the casualties numbered more than 200 and that all available ambulances were needed at the scene.

Fire broke out in the factory following the explosion in the main plant and other explosions followed as the flames spread to other buildings.

An hour after the first explosion twenty bodies had been recovered from the ruins and more than 125 persons had been taken to Paris hospitals. Fourteen of the first bodies recovered were those of soldiers who had been working in the factory during their convalescence after suffering wounds at the front.

Minister of the Interior Malvy visited the scene and later announced that the disaster was accidental, having been caused by the careless handling of grenades.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, March 4.—After showing moderate gains at the start there were recessions in the stock market this morning but business was wholly unprofessional. Some of the room traders bought at the outset while others put out short lines. Studebaker was in supply from the begining, declining 1⅞ to 136½. American Smelting was also weak, falling ⅞ to 97⅛. Steel Common opened ⅛ higher at 82 and then reacted to 81⅝. Mexican petroleum opened ¼ higher at 98½ and then fell to 97¾. Reading, after an initial gain of ⅜ to 82¾, dropped to 82⅛. At the end of the first fifteen minutes practically everything traded in ranged from fractions to about a point below yesterday's close.

The market closed heavy. A heavy tone prevailed throughout the last hour, the only exception to a declining tendency being Cuban American Sugar which sold at 192, a gain of 8¾ points over yesterday's close. Mexican Petroleum after selling at 100½ reacted to 99½. Alaska Gold Mine was freely supplied, yielding a point to 160. The leading railways showed fractional losses. Marine preferred dropped a point and the same amount of loss was recorded in American Locomotive. Government bonds unchanged; others irregular.

RAILWAYS HELP HEALTH CAMPAIGN

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Albany, March 4.—A new avenue of public health education through which the state department of health hopes to reach thousands of people with short talks on prevention of diseases is announced by Commissioner Herman M. Biggs today with a statement that five railroads have given the department permission to post health bulletins in their stations. The railroads participating are the New York Central, Delaware and Hudson Lehigh Valley, Erie and Pennsylvania.

"I think we ought to utilize every means of informing the public on health matters," said Dr. Biggs today. "With the co-operation of these five railroads we will be able to post bulletins in over 1,000 railroad stations where thousands of people passing each day will see them."

Extracts from letters of railroad presidents show that they are taking unusual interest in the work. "Our company will be very glad to co-operate with you," wrote E. F. Lores, president of the Delaware & Hudson. "We are anxious to co-operate with your department," said A. J. Stone, vice president of the Erie, and similar communications have been received from the other railroad officials.

The first bulletin posted by the department calls attention to the danger of communicating measles, scarlet fever, diphtheria, whooping cough, tuberculosis and similar diseases by coughing, sneezing and spitting. The bulletin also asks that the use of common drinking cups, soiled towels and handkerchiefs be avoided, and that care be taken to see that food is not contaminated by soiled hands.

The second bulletin, which will be posted within a few days, is a large map of the state of New York, drawn to show hospital provision for tuberculosis patients in the various counties. The legend, "Study this map," directs attention to the fact that in twenty-five counties no provision has been made for hospital care, and that while hospitals have been voted in twelve more counties, they have not as yet been provided.

"Do you live in a black county? Vote to make it white." "Is your county shaded? See that your expressed wishes are carried out now," is the telling direction given those who read the bulletins.

MEXICAN DISHES.

Some of these tasty dishes will appeal to the taste of the average diner.

Pepper Soup.—Take eight large chili peppers, remove the seeds and veins and put pulp through a colander, after cooking until tender. To this add a cupful of boiled rice, mashed smooth. Season highly with tabasco and salt. Beat one egg with a half cupful of cream and add it to a quart of milk, heated hot. Combine mixtures and let boil up once; pour over toasted squares of bread and serve immediately.

Tomato and Cheese Salad.—Take large, ripe tomatoes, peel and cut in half, lay on a bed of heart leaves of lettuce. Roll cream cheese, well seasoned, with butter paddles into balls. Lay two or three on each tomato slice, cover with mayonnaise and serve, sprinkled with paprika.

Baked Chicken a la Mexican.—Steam 20 minutes two young chickens, then cut up as for fricassee. Strain a can of tomatoes and mix with a can of corn; add one green pepper, chopped fine, a little parsley, cayenne pepper and paprika. Put the chicken into this mixture and thicken with bread crumbs. Bake in an earthen dish with lumps of butter over the top. Bake half an hour.

Fried Peppers With Cheese.—Choose large, green chilis and blister them in the oven until they peel easily. Cut open, remove the seeds and veins and wrap it around a piece of strong cheese. Fry in good, sweet lard or better, olive oil. Prepare a sauce of browned butter, flour and a flavor of garlic to pour over the peppers when ready to serve.

Chili Con Carne.—A dozen fresh chilies or the dry ones soaked; prepare as usual, put through a grinder. Cut in pieces a pound of beef or pork, brown in hot fat, then add a clove of garlic, an onion, cut fine, then add a tablespoonful of flour and the chili. Simmer ten minutes; add more water if necessary and serve.

Many were present from Stone Ridge, Lyonsville and Ashokan as well as from nearby villages. The play was well received by the audience, the performers doing their parts so well that it would be impossible to select anyone for especial praise. The cast follows: Texana Gump, Mabel Davis; Mrs. Juniper, Hazel Hogan; Jean McLean, Orpha Bishop; Victoria Keegan, Edna Merrihew; Max Juniper, G. Bishop; Alonzo Willing, H. Bishop; Sheriff Larrabee, L. B. Davis; deputy sheriff, R. Palen; Theodore Keegan, N. Bishop. Following the play a bountiful supper was served by the Ladies' Aid. Net proceeds of the evening were $75. It is needless to add that everyone feels well repaid for time spent in preparing for the evening. The young people wish to thank Mrs. A. Quick, who did training and prompting, helping to make the play so great a success. Deputy Sheriff Alonzo Davis was unable to be present owing to a severe cold.

SCHOOL ATHLETES WIN TWO GAMES

High School, 44; Catskill, 21.

Friday evening the High School Varsity Team played what is probably the last game of their season, and were victorious over Catskill by a score of 44 to 21.

This is a victory well worth remembering, for the visitors had an even finer team than the glowing reports heard concerning them would lead one to believe. They were all husky fellows, not the fat flabby kind, but real athletes, and when they began, during the practice before the game to make a basket every time they shot, the Kingston supporters began to shake their heads in some concern.

The local team took the matter seriously also, and every man played an unquestionably fine game. Star playing was not done by just one or two of the teams, it was done by them all, and the guarding and pass work of the local fellows proved far superior to that of the other team. Although Captain Palisi made but one basket he comes in for a full share of praise for it was his cautious, and energetic guarding that again and again kept the Catskill team from scoring. Silverman, Relyea and Duncan were only in the game three minutes so it is not their fault that they did not score more points.

In all the game was a very fitting conclusion for an exceedingly successful season. The visitors acknowledged that they were treated fairly, and the Kingston supporters who turned out in larger numbers, and were more enthusiastic than usual, know that they did.

The score was 19 to 8 in favor of Kingston at the end of the first half, and the finals were made up in the following way:

High School Girls, 60; Y. M. C. A. Girls, 18.

Friday afternoon the High School Girls defeated a team from the Thursday Afternoon Class for Girls in the Y. M. C. A. by a score of 60 to 18.

In spite of the uneven score the game was in some respects a good game, and the Y. M. C. A. Girls played a remarkable game when one considered that they have had practically no practice together and that they were playing on the home court of their opponents. As the visitors became more acquainted with the court their ability to score increased remarkably, for at the end of the first quarter the score was 20 to 0, at the end of the second quarter 38 to 2, at the end of the third, 48 to 4, and during the last quarter of the game the Y. M. C. A. Girls made twice as many points as they made during all the rest of the game.

The honors were well distributed between Miss Snyder and Miss Smith, while Miss Safford undoubtedly did the best playing for the high school. The reason that the guards and centers have no points after their names in the following is because the rules under which the girls play prohibit any but the forwards to make points.

BOY SCOUTS HAVE THREE TROOPS HERE

The Boy Scouts in Kingston are now four score strong and the lads are planning a busy year. At the meeting of the three troops Friday night it was decided to parade during Governor Whitman's visit the last part of March. At a union meeting next Friday in the Y. M. C. A. the Scouts will hold drill practice for the event.

The scouts are divided into three troops throughout the city and the selection of a troop is optional to a new member, or "tenderfoot" as he is called. All the troops hold regular meetings every Friday night.

Troop 1, with Harry Evory, boy's work secretary of the Y. M. C. A. as scoutmaster, meets at the Y. M. C. A. and consists of 43 scouts. Isador Rosenthal holds the position of assistant scout master of this troop.

Twenty-four live-wires are enrolled in Troop 2, which meets at the Lutheran Church of the Redeemer, corner Wurts and Rogers streets, under Edward Geischwinder scoutmaster, and Harry Spangenberger, assistant. This troop is under the supervision of Rev. Howard E. Snyder pastor of the church.

Munroe Burger is scoutmaster of Troop 3, which holds its meetings in Trinity M. E. Church on the corner of Wurts and Hunter streets. Twelve lads belong to this troop and their assistant scoutmasters are John Mackey and Charles Shultis.

Since the reorganization of the scouts in this city last September the organization has been progressing rapidly and many new members are being enrolled. The scoutmasters are subordinate to Scout Commissioner Charles Warren and the body which is in control of the local organization is the scout council, the members of which are the following: James O. Winston, president; Sam Bernstein, vice president; C. W. Walton, second vice president; W. B. Everett, secretary and treasurer. The executive committee consists of the above together with John D. Schoonmaker and David Burgevin.

The members of the scout council are the following prominent citizens of Kingston: Abraham Freeman, J. E. Klock, John B. Kearney, R. E. Leighton, William M. Davis, Arthur G. Carr, George Burgevin, Philip Elting, Henry R. DeWitt, Joseph M. Fowler, Rodney B. Osterhoudt, William C. DeWitt, Elvah H. Bogart, Judge G. D. B. Hasbrouck, Everett Fowler, Rev. Howard E. Snyder, Rev. F. B. Seeley, Rev. J. H. Briody, Captain Frank L. Meagher, J. Graham Rose, Frank B. Matthews, W. D. Cashin and Aaron Cohen.

NEW YORK SOCIETY WOMAN THREATENED IN GERMAN LETTERS.

New York, March 4.—Mrs. S. Barton French, a prominent society matron, has been warned that a blow from the German mailed fist will be dealt at her because she has been active in her expressions of sympathy for the Allies.

She has received two threatening letters from pro-German agitators. According to their letters, the writers are aroused because Mrs. French has arranged to tour the United States to raise funds for war sufferers in the territory of the Entente Powers.

One letter in German reads:

"Knowing that you have been received at the Court of the Emperor and presented to their Majesties and have been shown hospitality at the Imperial Palace, we feel that you cannot be guilty of such a breach of international courtesy as to range yourself definitely on the side of Germany's enemies.

"In the matter of your public performances, have a care lest what you say and recite should entail a very ugly memory."

Terence Maloney

A Story For St. Patrick's Day

By F. A. MITCHEL

You've all heard of Larry O'Toole
Of the beautiful town of Drumgoole.
He had but one eye
To ogle ye by—
Oh, murther, but that was a jew'l!
A fool
He made of the girls, this O'Toole.

Whoever was this Larry O'Toole of Mr. Thackeray's he was certainly the counterpart of one Terence Maloney, who was born in the eighteenth century and died in the nineteenth. Terence was about halfway through with his mortal career when the eighteenth century was coming to an end, and with it the differences between Ireland and England were entering upon one of their periodical explosions.

There was everything about Terence to cause him to be beloved. In the first place he had a fine crop of auburn hair on his head that kinked itself into dozens of little curls. Unlike Mr. Thackeray's friend, he had two eyes, brimming with good humor. His complexion was that mixture of white and red which is never found in such perfection as in Erin. His lips were cameo cut, and a succession of smiles was continually cascading over them. His figure was light and agile, his limbs being seemingly moved by hidden springs.

Such a combination of attractions might well be expected to make a fool of the girls. At any rate, not a girl ever came near him without giving him at least a part of her heart. But blame seemed to roll off Terence like water off a duck's back. No girl could complain of his endeavoring to win her, for he was in a constitutional state of girl wilming. The good humor constantly bubbling in his eyes and the smiles hovering about his lips were considered a perennial supply which all might quaff. If any girl inveighed against Terence for deceiving her there were dozens to condemn her for desiring to appropriate what belonged to every girl in Ireland.

Naturally when the troubles of '98 came on Terence was imbued heart and soul with rebellion. It is just such persons as he who enter upon enterprises without counting the cost. He was not a leader in the true sense of the word; he was rather a fomenter. Not that he went about pleading with his fellow countrymen to rise, but that, having taken up the cause of Ireland, he was so popular that every Irish man or woman who was in doubt as to his or her political part, on hearing that Terence Maloney was a patriot resolved at once to be a patriot too. If the real leaders of the movement desired to win over a town where old and experienced heads were influencing the people to caution they would send Terence there. He would ride through the main street, scattering smiles to the right and to the left, and the only oratorical effort needed were the words, spoken in Terence's rich, sonorous voice, "Are ye wid us?" Whereupon a succession of affirmative shouts would roll down the street, keeping pace with the orator.

Hence it was that one Peter Shaw, an agent of the English government sent to Ireland to send back information as to the best measure of suppressing the rebellion, wrote to London that there was one man, Terence Maloney, unknown to the government, who was doing more harm to the British cause than the real leaders. Shaw advised the government to arrest Maloney and get him across the channel, but he cautioned them against any public arrest, since Maloney was so popular that such course would influence all his friends. Shaw received instructions to use his own judgment in the matter.

It seemed advisable to the government agent to wait and watch for a favorable opportunity to eliminate Mr. Maloney. Not till the rebellion was coming to an end did he consider it safe to make the arrest. And then instead of accusing Terence of treason he trumped up a charge against him of highway robbery. Realizing what a stir it would make to prefer the former charge, he hoped to allay the feeling by proving that his man was a common criminal.

Shaw learned that on the evening before St. Patrick's day Terence was to attend a ball in the town hall of his native village. The agent got together a number of persons in his pay who were to lay a trap for the young patriot. Terence was present, scattering his smiles as usual. When the dancing was at its height a messenger delivered a note to Terence stating that a friend had been wounded in a duel and desired to see him immediately.

Terence left the hall, mounted a horse and rode away. In passing a place darkened by overhanging trees he was met by half a dozen men who asked him some questions, then, with a cry of "Robbery!" put spurs to their horses and dashed away in every direction. Terence sat on his horse, wondering what it all meant. But a solution was not long in coming to him. He knew that Shaw was desirous of arresting him for treason, but dared not do it. It now occurred to him that he had been called from the hall on purpose to be waylaid by these men, who would doubtless the next day charge him with having robbed them on the highway.

The moment the explanation came to him Terence rode back to the ballroom, and it was not long before what had occurred was known to every one present. Groups of his friends discussed the matter, and various schemes were proposed whereby Mr. Shaw might be headed off. Some were in favor of Terence's taking flight. Others argued that this would be a confession of guilt and opposed it. No decision was reached by Terence's men friends, but the women, at the suggestion of one of their number, determined to oppose his arrest. No more dancing was done, and gradually the revelers dispersed. Terence went to his home at 3 o'clock in the morning and to bed, expecting an arrest during the day. How he should meet the charge that would be brought against him, except by denial, he did not know. The rebellion had by this time proved abortive, and the English government held over him the power of life or death. Were he threatened with arrest for rebellion he would gallop away to parts unknown, but to run from a charge of robbery was more than his sensitive nature could bear.

However, trouble could not get a stronghold on the optimistic Terence, and he slept soundly till 10 o'clock in the morning. Then he awoke, looked at the clock, yawned and was about to turn over for another nap when a shadow passing his window arrested his attention. Sitting up in bed, he looked through the window and was astonished to see a girl with a fowling piece on her shoulder marching to and fro without.

Jumping out of bed, he donned a dressing gown and went about the house, looking out wherever there was an opening. In the yard were some twenty girls, all armed. A chain of feminine sentinels surrounded the house.

"Be the powers!" quoth Terence. "What does it mean?"

"Och, Terence," said his mother, who came up behind him, "the girls are determined that Shaw shan't take you away from 'em."

"What girls, mother?"

"Why, all the girls you love and who love you."

Terence was amazed.

"What in the name of St. Patrick are they goin' to do?"

"Resist an arrest."

"But, mother, I can't hide here protected by a company of girls."

Throwing open the front door, he appeared, looking very handsome in his informal apparel. He was met by a clapping of hands and shouts of approbation.

"Girls! Darlints!" he shouted. "I'm thinkin'"—

"Keep on thinkin', and go back in the house."

"This won't do. I'm a man"—

Several girls ran up on to the porch, hustled him through the door, shut and locked it. This was done because a posse was seen coming down the street. Each girl took up her implement of war—some guns, some sickles, some pokers—and formed in line before the house. Shaw was with the posse and was evidently directing their movements. He advanced, with the words:

"What's this?"

One of the girls, who was evidently their leader, replied: "You're intending to arrest Terence Maloney on a false charge. We're going to resist you."

Shaw seemed very much astonished. He forced a smile, looked at the array of amazons curiously, then retired and held a conference with his men. He was determined to force his way into the house in spite of the feminine guard. The six men composing the guard, armed with shillalahs, advanced. A cordon of girls stood in their way. Some poked the men with sticks, some brandished sickles in their faces, and suddenly an upper window of the house opened and Terence's mother emptied a bucket of boiling water on the men's heads. This caused a retreat.

The besiegers as soon as they had gone beyond the range of the women halted and began a consultation which lasted for some time, for the problem of men subduing more than double their number of girls without injuring some of them, which Shaw did not relish doing, was a problem. Terence had a view of the men from a window and chafed at not being able to take a hand in the fray. He had looked for a fowling piece he kept hanging on the wall, but his mother, not caring to have her son risk a charge of resistance to the legal authorities, perhaps murder, had hidden the gun. A charge of robbery, she said, was quite enough. So Terence was obliged to content himself with witnessing his defense by women without taking a hand in the scrimmage.

All St. Patrick's day the girls stood guard over their favorite, and every time an advance was made some new method was devised on the part of the defense to drive them back, though hot water was found to be the most effective. Toward evening Shaw drew off his force. Then Terence came out on to the porch and tried to thank his defenders, but there was such a babel of tongues, so many interruptions, that he was obliged to desist. So he invited them in for a snack and one and all accepted.

Long before this some of the men of the town had gathered about the house guying the posse and encouraging the girls. Indeed, whenever it looked as if the latter would be worsted these men showed signs of taking a hand in the defense. When the posse retired all went in to congratulate Terence on having been so ably defended, and the evening was spent in revelry.

The next morning Shaw went back to England, and Terence Maloney was thenceforth free from molestation.

Tribulations of a Volunteer.

Richard de Gunpowder was an enthusiast. He was so enthusiastic that he enlisted in the Harvard hundreds. Moreover, he was so very enthusiastic that he enlisted twice. Then matters became confused, for he was assigned to two different regiments.

In some way, however, he managed to persuade his superior officers that he would rather be wholly and entirely in one company than partly in two. So one of his enlisted selves joined the other in the same squad. But now he was absolutely beside himself; every time he turned around he hit himself in the back; whenever he was out of step he trod on his own heels; every time he—what should—what could he do? What would you have done?

But the captain was cleverer than you. He selected one of Richard's enlisted selves and made him an officer. So now Sergeant de Gunpowder once more has complete command of himself.—Harvard Lampoon.

Poe and the Magazine.

With his stories and his criticisms during the meager two years of his connection with the magazine Poe was certainly able to reflect that as at no time in her previous literary history he had put Richmond on the map. But the letter he wrote to Anthon when projecting the Stylus was somewhat flamboyant: "I had joined the Messenger, as you know then in its second year, with 700 subscribers, and the general outcry was that because a magazine had never succeeded south of the Potomac therefore a magazine never could succeed. Yet in spite of this and the wretched taste of the proprietor, which hampered and controlled me at all points, I increased the circulation in fifteen months to 5,500 subscribers, paying an annual profit of $10,000 when I left it."—Algernon Tassin in Bookman.

A Remarkable Concert.

A program of a remarkable concert which took place in Carlsbad on Aug. 6, 1812, is still preserved in the city archives at that place. The entertainment was given for the benefit of the sufferers by the fire which had laid waste Baden and took place at the Saechsischer Saal. The only performers were Beethoven and Polledro, who played their own compositions. There were two pianoforte and two violin solos and several numbers in which both took part, says the writer. The account of the entertainment also mentions the fact that one of the interested listeners was a "tall, elderly man, wearing a great blue coat, who sat perfectly erect throughout the performance, never looking anywhere but at the stage. This was Goethe." The amount realized for the fund was about $200.

Easy Way to Use Liniments.

Put the liniment in an atomizer, such as is used for perfumes, and when needed to use just squirt the liniment on the affected parts and rub with the tip ends of the fingers. I have tried this for some time and find it not only very convenient, but it is a great saving of the liquid.

GIRL BRIDE "SLAYER" MAY ESCAPE TRIAL.

Fort Worth, Texas, March 4.—Relatives of W. R. Warren, killed by Katherine Vance Harrison, who alleged he attacked her, took steps today to prove that she is eighteen years old instead of fifteen, as she and her mother declare.

If her age is only fifteen, the Texas law renders her exempt from a charge of murder, but if she is eighteen she can be indicted and prosecuted.

But not all the proof in the world would cause the Texas jury to convict her in the present frame of public sentiment here.

Indictment of the young bride still hangs fire. She has confessed under oath that she shot and killed Warren, yet the grand jury that heard her story hesitates to act.

The truth of the matter is that public sentiment is so strongly in favor of the young girl that it would not be at all surprising if no action ever is taken against her.

The Devil's Bible.

A remarkable exhibit at the royal palace in Stockholm is the so-called Devil's Bible, a huge copy of the Scriptures, written on 300 prepared asses' skins. Tradition says that it took 500 years, or from the eighth to the thirteenth century, to complete the work, which is so large it occupies an entire table. According to another tale, Satan did the job in a night and gave the monkish recipient of the gift a picture of his fiery self for the frontispiece.

RAILWAYS HELP HEALTH CAMPAIGN

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Albany, March 4.—A new avenue of public health education through which the state department of health hopes to reach thousands of people with short talks on prevention of diseases is announced by Commissioner Herman M. Biggs today with a statement that five railroads have given the department permission to post health bulletins in their stations. The railroads participating are the New York Central, Delaware and Hudson Lehigh Valley, Erie and Pennsylvania.

"I think we ought to utilize every means of informing the public on health matters," said Dr. Biggs today. "With the co-operation of these five railroads we will be able to post bulletins in over 1,000 railroad stations where thousands of people passing each day will see them."

Extracts from letters of railroad presidents show that they are taking unusual interest in the work. "Our company will be very glad to co-operate with you," wrote E. F. Lores, president of the Delaware & Hudson. "We are anxious to co-operate with your department," said A. J. Stone, vice president of the Erie, and similar communications have been received from the other railroad officials.

The first bulletin posted by the department calls attention to the danger of communicating measles, scarlet fever, diphtheria, whooping cough, tuberculosis and similar diseases by coughing, sneezing and spitting. The bulletin also asks that the use of common drinking cups, soiled towels and handkerchiefs be avoided, and that care be taken to see that food is not contaminated by soiled hands.

The second bulletin, which will be posted within a few days, is a large map of the state of New York, drawn to show hospital provision for tuberculosis patients in the various counties. The legend, "Study this map," directs attention to the fact that in twenty-five counties no provision has been made for hospital care, and that while hospitals have been voted in twelve more counties, they have not as yet been provided.

"Do you live in a black county? Vote to make it white." "Is your county shaded? See that your expressed wishes are carried out now." is the telling direction given those who read the bulletins.

MEXICAN DISHES.

Some of these tasty dishes will appeal to the taste of the average diner.

Pepper Soup.—Take eight large chili peppers, remove the seeds and veins and put pulp through a colander, after cooking until tender. To this add a cupful of boiled rice, mashed smooth. Season highly with tabasco and salt. Beat one egg with a half cupful of cream and add it to a quart of milk, heated hot. Combine mixtures and let boil up once; pour over toasted squares of bread and serve immediately.

Tomato and Cheese Salad.—Take large, ripe tomatoes, peel and cut in half, lay on a bed of heart leaves of lettuce. Roll cream cheese, well seasoned, with butter paddles into balls. Lay two or three on each tomato slice, cover with mayonnaise and serve, sprinkled with paprika.

Baked Chicken a la Mexican.—Steam 20 minutes two young chickens, then cut up as for fricassee. Strain a can of tomatoes and mix with a can of corn; add one green pepper, chopped fine, a little parsley, cayenne pepper and paprika. Put the chicken into this mixture and thicken with bread crumbs. Bake in an earthen dish with lumps of butter over the top. Bake half an hour.

Fried Peppers With Cheese.—Choose large, green chilis and blister them in the oven until they peel easily. Cut open, remove the seeds and veins and wrap it around a piece of strong cheese. Fry in good, sweet lard or better, olive oil. Prepare a sauce of browned butter, flour and a flavor of garlic to pour over the peppers when ready to serve.

Chili Con Carne.—A dozen fresh chilies or the dry ones soaked; prepare as usual, put through a grinder. Cut in pieces a pound of beef or pork, brown in hot fat, then add a clove of garlic, an onion, cut fine, then add a tablespoonful of flour and the chili. Simmer ten minutes; add more water if necessary and serve.

KINGSTON, N. Y., MARCH 4, 1916.

Another great "victory" was won by President Wilson yesterday, according to his admiring supporters. He had demanded that Congress take some positive action showing that it was behind him in his stand for American rights on the sea, so that foreign powers might no longer suspect him of misrepresenting his country's sentiment. In response to this the Senate voted by a majority of four to one to lay on the table a resolution reciting that "whereas the right of American citizens to travel on armed belligerent vessels rather than upon unarmed vessels is essential neither to their life, liberty or safety; nor to the independence, dignity or security of the United States," therefore be it resolved "that the sinking by a submarine without notice or warning of an armed merchant vessel of her public enemy, resulting in the death of a citizen of the United States, would constitute a just and sufficient cause of war between the United States and the German Empire." That sounds like the remarks of a half-witted man in delirium. It is hard to see how anybody could be blamed much for voting either way on the question to table such a resolution. Senator Smoot, who always thinks rationally, declined to vote at all on what he called "a question that means nothing." Yet papers like the New York Times are simply gloating over the "victory." Today it is expected that the House will follow the Senate's example, after which more red fire will be touched off. After this, the Kaiser will be more careful how he trifles with the wishes of a President who can command such whole-hearted, enthusiastic support.

Mark Twain's famous remark that the report of his death was "greatly exaggerated" is recalled by the letter received from a former Kingston resident who denies the published report of his death. It is "news" of "deaths" of this character and their subsequent denials that give conscientious editors gray hair and hurry them to an early grave. In so important a thing as death, which happens only once to the average human being, as we are led to believe, some degree of accuracy should be insisted upon. The newspapers cannot be blamed for publishing items vouched for by the immediate relatives but the spectacle of men turning up at what was supposedly their personal funerals has occurred so often that it is no longer news. It is too much to ask any man to stay "dead" even in the interest of newspaper accuracy, but certainly more care could be exercised in a multitude of instances. Premature reports of death cause no end of annoyance and seriously affect the standing of the newspaper, the innocent third party in such cases.

In Brooklyn, where Dr. David Allyn Gorton, an eighty-three year-old authority on eugenics, died a fortnight ago, his widow is hopefully waiting for his return in the spirit to advise her upon the momentous question of who shall be entrusted with the publication of two books on the science of eugeniology which he left as a legacy to his family. The family consists of twins, David and Leonora, three years old, and it is in hourly expectation of their father's return that the mother waits. This is a new side to eugenics. Advice from the spirit world would certainly be appreciated in many other things besides the printing of books. For instance, if the doctor could establish a means of communicating with this sphere, the twins would have a remarkable start in life with an octogenarian experience in two worlds to guide them. This would, indeed, be a triumph for the new cult. The only barrier in sight is the length of time before the communication system gets into operation. Somebody has said it is the province of woman to wait. In this instance, the widow's province seems likely to be extended unless some resourceful publisher appreciates the value of the advance advertising already given the works in question.

Arbor Day observances are to be changed this year into celebrations of the tercentenary of Shakespeare's death in many of the public schools of the State—surely an appropriate form for such an observance to take. English folk dances and some tableaux representative of Shakespeare's works are among the suggestions named by the United States Bureau of Education for this occasion, which could be carried out with comparatively little trouble by school authorities. Anything which makes for student interest in Shakespeare deserves attention for modern tendencies to cheap movies and other distractions are away from the best in literature and the drama. Whether school pupils dance in honor of the immortal bard, or whether they take part in a pageant or some simpler exhibition portraying Shakespeare's genius, makes no difference. Their celebration of the tercentenary will serve to stir anew an interest in the subject and works which have stood the test of three centuries—a thing quite as important in itself as the planting of a tree or two in a bare corner of a schoolyard.

March came in like a lamb. It is hoped the rest of the old saying will not prove true, and it will go out like a lamb instead of a lion.

The new pastor of the Reformed Church, Rev. Dangremond, of New Hurley, and his wife are being entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Church and Mr. and Mrs. J. M. The dance given by Mr. and Mrs. Preston Church at St. John's Hall on Thursday evening of this week was a great social success. There were about two hundred present. This is the largest number that has yet been in attendance at any of the social dances and all present spent a delightful evening. Refreshments were served at 12 and the gathering broke up at 2.

The Little Matter.

A certain captain of industry, complimented on an immense war contract, said in New York:

"One beauty about these contracts is their strict honesty. There are no palms to grease.

"It wasn't always so in war contracts. In fact, they tell a story about a war contractor who once broke the silence of his club reading with a dreadful sigh.

"'What's the matter?' a brother contractor asked.

"'Alas, alas!' said the first contractor; 'I've just bought 5,000,000 pairs of shoes at $1 a pair and sold them to the army for $6, and I'm afraid the loss with ruin me.'

"'Loss? Loss?' said the other contractor. 'What are you talking about, man? On 5,000,000 pairs of shoes, with a five-dollar profit, how can there be a loss?'

"'My dear fellow,' said the first contractor, sadly, 'you forget the little matter of commissions.'"—New York Times.

His Job.

There was once a rich but very mean old lady who paid her servants as little as possible, and kept very few.

One of her staff was a thin, miserable looking lad of 12, who answered the door, did the knives and the windows, waited at table, weeded the garden, washed the poodle, and had the rest of the time to himself.

One visitor asked him: "Well, my boy, and what do you do here?"

"I do a butler and a gardener out of a job!" snapped the lad, sourly.—Tit-Bits.

The Byplay Minstrels.

"Mister Interlocutor, can you tell me why a room full or married people is like an empty room?"

"No, Brother Bones, I cannot. Will you tell us why?"

"Because there is not a single person in it."

"Very good, Mr. Bones. And what have you to say this evening, Mr. Tambo?"

"Can you tell how many eggs a man can eat on an empty stomach?"

"No, Mr. Tambo, I cannot. Will you tell us how many?"

"One, because after that his stomach wouldn't be empty."

"After the smoke has cleared away and the blood has been mopped up from the stage; Mr. Letts Lynchum will render that pathetic ballad, "Ten Million Squirrels Have Starved to Death Since Henry Ford's Ship Steamed Away."—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

William Dean Howells, congratulated in Boston on his Stratford-Shakespeare story.

"In Stratford," he said, "during one of the Shakespeare jubilees, an American tourist approached an aged villager in a smock and asked:

"'Who is this chap, Shakespeare, anyway?'

"'He was a writer, sir.'

"'Oh, but there are lots of writers. Why do you make such an infernal fuss over this one, then? Wherever I turn I see Shakespeare hotels, Shakespeare cakes, Shakespeare chocolates, Shakespeare shoes. What the deuce did he write—magazine stories, attacks on the government, shady novels?'

"'No, sir; oh, no, sir,' said the aged villager. 'I understand he writ for the Bible, sir.'"—Boston Post.

Why Teachers Go Insane.

"There were no Christians among the early Gauls," was one answer received in a recent grammar school history examination, "they were mostly lawyers." Said another: "A blizzard is the inside of a hen."

A Wise Answer.

Demaratus, a Spartan statesman, when asked why he held his tongue during a useless argument and was accused of being a fool for so doing, replied: "Not so; a fool cannot hold his tongue."

KINGSTON CIRCLES' WORK COMMENDED

That the women of Kingston are doing their part toward the relief of suffering among the wounded of the allies, is plainly shown by the following letter from Miss Carita Spencer, national chairman of the Surgical Dressings Committee. The letter has just been received by the secretary of the Circles of Mercy of Kingston, and is as follows:

Among the many thousands of surgical dressings which are daily being received at the New York headquarters of the Surgical Dressings Committee, those in the boxes from Kingston stand out pre-eminent for accuracy of workmanship and excellence of quality. The work which is being done by the Circles of Mercy of Kingston, proves that the women of that city have the right sort of enthusiasm to carry on this much needed war relief work.

The Kingston committee has sent thousands of dressings, each made in accordance with special directions. These dressings have gone to the distributing bureaus in France, and from there are requisitioned by the needy hospitals. Each hospital requests and receives the kind and quantity of dressings needed for its patients at the moment. In this way there is no danger of our sending large absorbent pads particularly adapted for serious fresh wounds where a hospital has only convalescent patients and vice versa. Within the last few months, the Paris distributing bureau has supplied about 350 different hospitals. This does not include the repeated requests which are always filled before a request from a new hospital on the list is attended to. The Bordeaux bureau has supplied over 100 hospitals. If there is any doubt in the mind of anyone as to the pressing need for this kind of help from the women of America, a glance at the numerous letters of appreciation and thanks which have been received at the New York headquarters, would dispel this. Furthermore, two members of our committee have already visited France and assured themselves of the value of this work.

The National Surgical Dressings Committee is now a well developed organization, having about 700 subcommittees throughout the United States, and many states organized under state chairmen. Mrs. Edward R. Hewitt of New York city has very recently accepted the chairmanship of New York state. Notable among these sub-committees is the Circles of Mercy of Kingston which has contributed so generously in time, material and labor. It is hoped that the membership of this Kingston committee will continue to grow, that before long every woman in that city will have gone through her rag-bag and taken her old linen and cotton to be made into surgical dressings. The spring drive in the war zone will soon be on and then think of the conditions of the hospitals.

A shipment of about 30,000 dressings goes out on the French line every Saturday, the bulk of it to the Paris and Bordeaux bureaus and a few cases to special addresses. This week's shipment, going out on the S. S. Espagne, totals over 34,000 and has cases for the Princess of Belgium, Princess Alice of Greece at Salonika, several special French hospitals and two English ones. Also a box for the Canadian boys at Shonecliffe, England. In some one of these boxes, Kingston is represented. The longer this disastrous war lasts the greater will become the need for help from neutral nations. We hope that Kingston will stand by the Surgical Dressings Committee with ever increasing effort.

CARITA SPENCER,
National Chairman.

As the result of the visit of Mrs. Mary Hatch Willard of New York to this city last Saturday, and her eloquent address in behalf of the Circles of Mercy, given at the chapel of the First Dutch Church, there was an unusually enthusiastic and effective meeting of the local organization held at the Y. M. C. A. Thursday. All women who can possibly spare a few hours each Thursday morning to help in this work will be showing their love for humanity by aiding at the Y. M. C. A.

In the Days of Youth.

"Children's affairs become important the moment an adult discusses them in their presence. Questions of lying, deceit, morality, self-defense and the like should never be taken up in advance of the need. The Boston woman who told her children 'never to put beans in their ears,' which they promptly did, is sure to understand me. Experimental lies start in this way, and gain great headway, for the parent who anticipates them is always on the lookout and is generally rewarded."—Exchange.

For a Sore Throat.

A cleansing gargle for the throat when suffering from tonsilitis or an attack of quinsy can be prepared from bicarbonate of soda. Dissolve a heaping teaspoonful of bicarbonate of soda in a coffee cup of boiling water and add to this two drops of the essence of peppermint. Use the gargle while it is quite hot—not enough to burn the throat. Repeat the treatment every four hours. Do not go out of doors after using a gargle, as there is danger of aggravating the condition in the throat.

Optimistic Thought.

Instinct and reason are the difference between man and the brute.

The "Dog Letter."

The letter "R" was called the "dog letter" by the ancients because the manner in which they pronounced it resembled to a degree the snarling of a dog. It is the last letter that most children learn to pronounce. They use "w" instead, saying "vewy" for very, or "Wobert" for Robert. The Chinese invariably use "l" in the place of "r," which they cannot pronounce.

Calendars Long in Use.

The Egyptian calendar, fixing the length of the year at 365 days, was adopted a little more than 4,300 years before Christ. Of course it took a pretty high civilization, which in this case means an old one, to arrive at such a calendar. Scholars agree that some Chaldean inscriptions date from fifty to seventy centuries B. C., and no one pretends that the oldest of these mementoes have been found.

SAFEST and BEST

IT is the Socony sign—displayed by all dealers who sell genuine Socony (So-CO-ny) Kerosene Oil.

A good product is worth giving a name to. Accordingly, we have given the trademarked name Socony to our best grade of kerosene oil. Ask for Socony and you are sure of getting the best.

Every gallon of Socony Kerosene conforms to certain fixed standards of quality. And quality is just as important in kerosene as it is in any of the other things you buy from your grocer—sugar, or flour or butter.

Socony Kerosene is free from dirt or other impurities, burns with a clear full flame, and does not make wick crust. It is so much better than ordinary kerosene that it is decidedly worth asking for.

Say "Socony" to the grocer's boy when he comes to take your oil can. Look for the Socony sign in the window of the grocery, hardware or general store where you buy your kerosene.

It is a quality sign and one of the easiest ways to recognize a reliable dealer.

We recommend the following oil burning devices as the best of their kind: New Perfection Oil Cookstoves and Water Heaters, Perfection Smokeless Oil Heaters, Rayo Lamps and Lanterns.

SCHOOL ATHLETES WIN TWO GAMES

High School, 44; Catskill, 21.

Friday evening the High School Varsity Team played what is probably the last game of their season, and were victorious over Catskill by a score of 44 to 21.

This is a victory well worth remembering, for the visitors had an even finer team than the glowing reports heard concerning them would lead one to believe. They were all husky fellows, not the fat flabby kind, but real athletes, and when they began, during the practice before the game to make a basket every time they shot, the Kingston supporters began to shake their heads in some concern.

The local team took the matter seriously also, and every man played an unquestionably fine game. Star playing was not done by just one or two of the teams, it was done by them all, and the guarding and pass work of the local fellows proved far superior to that of the other team. Although Captain Palisi made but one basket he comes in for a full share of praise for it was his cautious, and energetic guarding that again and again kept the Catskill team from scoring. Silverman, Relyea and Duncan were only in the game three minutes so it is not their fault that they did not score more points.

In all the game was a very fitting conclusion for an exceedingly successful season. The visitors acknowledged that they were treated fairly, and the Kingston supporters who turned out in larger numbers, and were more enthusiastic than usual, know that they did.

The score was 19 to 8 in favor of Kingston at the end of the first half, and the finals were made up in the following way:

High School Girls, 60; Y. M. C. A. Girls, 18.

Friday afternoon the High School Girls defeated a team from the Thursday Afternoon Class for Girls in the Y. M. C. A. by a score of 60 to 18.

In spite of the uneven score the game was in some respects a good game, and the Y. M. C. A. Girls played a remarkable game when one considered that they have had practically no practice together and that they were playing on the home court of their opponents. As the visitors became more acquainted with the court their ability to score increased remarkably, for at the end of the first quarter the score was 20 to 0, at the end of the second quarter 38 to 2, at the end of the third, 48 to 4, and during the last quarter of the game the Y. M. C. A. Girls made twice as many points as they made during all the rest of the game.

The honors were well distributed between Miss Snyder and Miss Smith, while Miss Safford undoubtedly did the best playing for the high school. The reason that the guards and centers have no points after their names in the following is because the rules under which the girls play prohibit any but the forwards to make points.

Botanical Phenomenon.

A remarkable botanical phenomenon is the fact that while the state of Wisconsin has been plentifully supplied with hemlock, Minnesota, for many miles separated from its neighbor by nothing but the St. Croix river, has almost none of that timber, except one tiny spot of 240 acres.

Value of Ripe Olives.

Pound for pound, ripe olives, so far as total value of heat unit is concerned, contain almost as much food value as bread, and in the case of very large olives the value may be increased to approximately the same as that of bread.

BOY SCOUTS HAVE THREE TROOPS HERE

The Boy Scouts in Kingston are now four score strong and the lads are planning a busy year. At the meeting of the three troops Friday night it was decided to parade during Governor Whitman's visit the last part of March. At a union meeting next Friday in the Y. M. C. A. the Scouts will hold drill practice for the event.

The scouts are divided into three troops throughout the city and the selection of a troop is optional to a new member, or "tenderfoot" as he is called. All the troops hold regular meetings every Friday night.

Troop 1, with Harry Every, boy's work secretary of the Y. M. C. A. as scoutmaster, meets at the Y. M. C. A. and consists of 43 scouts. Isador Rosenthal holds the position of assistant scout master of this troop.

Twenty-four live-wires are enrolled in Troop 2, which meets at the Lutheran Church of the Redeemer, corner Wurts and Rogers streets, under Edward Geischwinder scoutmaster, and Harry Spangenberger, assistant. This troop is under the supervision of Rev. Howard E. Snyder pastor of the church.

Munroe Burger is scoutmaster of Troop 3, which holds its meetings in Trinity M. E. Church on the corner of Wurts and Hunter streets. Twelve lads belong to this troop and their assistant scoutmasters are John Mackey and Charles Shultis.

Since the reorganization of the scouts in this city last September the organization has been progressing rapidly and many new members are being enrolled. The scoutmasters are subordinate to Scout Commissioner Charles Warren and the body which is in control of the local organization is the scout council, the members of which are the following: James O. Winston, president; Sam Bernstein, vice president; C. W. Walton, second vice president; W. B. Everett, secretary and treasurer. The executive committee consists of the above together with John D. Schoonmaker and David Burgevin.

The members of the scout council are the following prominent citizens of Kingston: Abraham Freeman, J. E. Klock, John B. Kearney, R. E. Leighton, William M. Davis, Arthur G. Carr, George Burgevin, Philip Elting, Henry R. DeWitt, Joseph M. Fowler, Rodney B. Osterhoudt, William C. DeWitt, Elvah H. Bogart, Judge G. D. B. Hasbrouck, Everett Fowler, Rev. Howard E. Snyder, Rev. F. B. Seeley, Rev. J. H. Briody, Captain Frank L. Meagher, J. Graham Rose, Frank B. Matthews, W. D. Cashin and Aaron Cohen.

NEW YORK SOCIETY WOMAN THREATENED IN GERMAN LETTERS.

New York, March 4.—Mrs. S. Barton French, a prominent society matron, has been warned that a blow from the German mailed fist will be dealt at her because she has been active in her expressions of sympathy for the Allies.

She has received two threatening letters from pro-German agitators. According to their letters, the writers are aroused because Mrs. French has arranged to tour the United States to raise funds for war sufferers in the territory of the Entente Powers.

One letter in German reads:

"Knowing that you have been received at the Court of the Emperor and presented to their Majesties and have been shown hospitality at the Imperial Palace, we feel that you cannot be guilty of such a breach of international courtesy as to range yourself definitely on the side of Germany's enemies.

"In the matter of your public performances, have a care lest what you say and recite should entail a very ugly memory."

Terence Maloney

A Story For St. Patrick's Day

By F. A. MITCHEL

You've all heard of Larry O'Toole
Of the beautiful town of Drumgoole.
He had but one eye
To ogle his by—
Oh, murther, but that was a jew'l!
A fool
He made of the girls, this O'Toole.

Whoever was this Larry O'Toole of Mr. Thackeray's he was certainly the counterpart of one Terence Maloney, who was born in the eighteenth century and died in the nineteenth. Terence was about halfway through with his mortal career when the eighteenth century was coming to an end, and with it the differences between Ireland and England were entering upon one of their periodical explosions.

There was everything about Terence to cause him to be beloved. In the first place he had a fine crop of auburn hair on his head that kinked itself into dozens of little curls. Unlike Mr. Thackeray's friend, he had two eyes, brimming with good humor. His complexion was that mixture of white and red which is never found in such perfection as in Erin. His lips were cameo cut, and a succession of smiles was continually cascading over them. His figure was light and agile, his limbs being seemingly moved by hidden springs.

Such a combination of attractions might well be expected to make a fool of the girls. At any rate, not a girl ever came near him without giving him at least a part of her heart. But blame seemed to roll off Terence like water off a duck's back. No girl could complain of his endeavoring to win her, for he was in a constitutional state of girl wilming. The good humor constantly bubbling in his eyes and the smiles hovering about his lips were considered a perennial supply which all might quaff. If any girl inveighed against Terence for deceiving her there were dozens to condemn her for desiring to appropriate what belonged to every girl in Ireland.

Naturally when the troubles of '98 came on Terence was imbued heart and soul with rebellion. It is just such persons as he who enter upon enterprises without counting the cost. He was not a leader in the true sense of the word; he was rather a fomenter. Not that he went about pleading with his fellow countrymen to rise, but that, having taken up the cause of Ireland, he was so popular that every Irish man or woman who was in doubt as to his or her political part, on hearing that Terence Maloney was a patriot resolved at once to be a patriot too. If the real leaders of the movement desired to have a conference with his men. He was determined to force his way into the house in spite of the feminine guard. The six men composing the guard, armed with shillalahs, advanced. A cordon of girls stood in their way. Some poked the men with sticks, some brandished sickles in their faces, and suddenly an upper window of the house opened and Terence's mother emptied a bucket of boiling water on the men's heads. This caused a retreat.

The besiegers as soon as they had gone beyond the range of the women halted and began a consultation which lasted for some time, for the problem of men subduing more than double their number of girls without injuring some of them, which Shaw did not relish doing, was a problem. Terence had a view of the men from a window and chafed at not being able to take a hand in the fray. He had looked for a fowling piece he kept hanging on the wall, but his mother, not caring to have her son risk a charge of resistance to the legal authorities, perhaps murder, had hidden the gun. A charge of robbery, she said, was quite enough. So Terence was obliged to content himself with witnessing his defense by women without taking a hand in the scrimmage.

All St. Patrick's day the girls stood guard over their favorite, and every time an advance was made some new method was devised on the part of the defense to drive them back, though hot water was found to be the most effective. Toward evening Shaw drew off his force. Then Terence came out on to the porch and tried to thank his defenders, but there was such a babel of tongues, so many interruptions, that he was obliged to desist. So he invited them in for a snack and one and all accepted.

Long before this some of the men of the town had gathered about the house guying the posse and encouraging the girls. Indeed, whenever it looked as if the latter would be worsted these men showed signs of taking a hand in the defense. When the posse retired all went in to congratulate Terence on having been so ably defended, and the evening was spent in revelry.

The next morning Shaw went back to England, and Terence Maloney was thenceforth free from molestation.

Tribulations of a Volunteer.

Richard de Gunpowder was an enthusiast. He was so enthusiastic that he enlisted in the Harvard hundreds. Moreover, he was so very enthusiastic that he enlisted twice. Then matters became confused, for he was assigned to two different regiments.

In some way, however, he managed to persuade his superior officers that he would rather be wholly and entirely in one company than partly in two. So one of his enlisted selves joined the other in the same squad. But now he was absolutely beside himself: every time he turned around he hit himself in the back; whenever he was out of step he trod on his own heels; every time he—what should—what could he do? What would you have done?

But the captain was cleverer than you. He selected one of Richard's enlisted selves and made him an officer. So now Sergeant de Gunpowder once more has complete command of himself.—Harvard Lampoon.

Poe and the Magazine.

With his stories and his criticisms during the meager two years of his connection with the magazine Poe was certainly able to reflect that as at no time in her previous literary history he had put Richmond on the map. But the letter he wrote to Anthon when projecting the Stylus was somewhat flamboyant: "I had joined the Messenger, as you know then in its second year, with 700 subscribers, and the general outcry was that because a magazine had never succeeded south of the Potomac therefore a magazine never could succeed. Yet in spite of this and the wretched taste of the proprietor, which hampered and controlled me at all points, I increased the circulation in fifteen months to 5,500 subscribers, paying an annual profit of $10,000 when I left it."—Algernon Tassin in Bookman.

A Remarkable Concert.

A program of a remarkable concert which took place in Carlsbad on Aug. 6, 1812, is still preserved in the city archives at that place. The entertainment was given for the benefit of the sufferers by the fire which had laid waste Baden and took place at the Saechsischer Saal. The only performers were Beethoven and Polledro, who played their own compositions. There were two pianoforte and two violin solos and several numbers in which both took part, says the writer. The account of the entertainment also mentions the fact that one of the interested listeners was a "tall, elderly man, wearing a great blue coat, who sat perfectly erect throughout the performance, never looking anywhere but at the stage. This was Goethe." The amount realized for the fund was about $200.

Easy Way to Use Liniments.

Put the liniment in an atomizer, such as is used for perfumes, and when needed to use just squirt the liniment on the affected parts and rub with the tip ends of the fingers. I have tried this for some time and find it not only very convenient, but it is a great saving of the liquid.

GIRL BRIDE "SLAYER" MAY ESCAPE TRIAL.

Fort Worth, Texas, March 4.—Relatives of W. R. Warren, killed by Katherine Vance Harrison, who alleged he attacked her, took steps today to prove that she is eighteen years old instead of fifteen, as she and her mother declare.

If her age is only fifteen, the Texas law renders her exempt from a charge of murder, but if she is eighteen she can be indicted and prosecuted.

But not all the proof in the world would cause the Texas jury to convict her in the present frame of public sentiment here.

Indictment of the young bride still hangs fire. She has confessed under oath that she shot and killed Warren, yet the grand jury that heard her story hesitates to act.

The truth of the matter is that public sentiment is so strongly in favor of the young girl that it would not be at all surprising if no action ever is taken against her.

The Devil's Bible.

A remarkable exhibit at the royal palace in Stockholm is the so-called Devil's Bible, a huge copy of the Scriptures, written on 300 prepared asses' skins. Tradition says that it took 500 years, or from the eighth to the thirteenth century, to complete the work, which is so large it occupies an entire table. According to another tale, Satan did the job in a night and gave the monkish recipient of the gift a picture of his fiery self for the frontispiece.

SAM McCRACKEN.

SAM MCCRACKEN SPEAKS.

New York, March 4.—While much has been said and written about Tex Rickard, Tom Jones, Ike Dorgan and even Frank Moran and Jess Willard, all connected with the big fight to be staged on March 25, comparatively little about Sam McCracken who with Rickard is promoting the bout, has been put before the reading public.

The other day McCracken took a few minutes off to tell a newspaper man all about himself.

"As a boy," said Mr. McCracken, "I lived about a hundred and fifty miles outside of St. Louis. My father was in the horse and mule business and at the age of twelve, I used to take two and three carloads of cattle into the St. Louis markets. Later we moved to Kansas City, but dad remained in the same game. It was the horse business that first brought Tex and me together and ours has been a friendship of many years.

"I was twenty years old when I joined the Ringling Brothers. That's just twenty years ago, he said with a faraway smile. "For ten years I acted as the general representative for them, but for the past six years I have devoted my efforts to the Barnum & Bailey show acting as manager.

"I have been trying to get out of the game, but somehow the Ringlings want me to stick. To be honest with you, I am not absolutely certain about it now. I have been in every city in America, and and Canada with a population of 5,000 and up. Of course, there is a heap of hard work to it, but there is too, a certain amount of pleasure. There are a thousand different situations to be met each day, and it requires more attention than any other business I know."

What managing a circus means, the average layman has no idea. But let it be known that it is one of the biggest jobs ever devised. For instance, the Barnum & Bailey show takes eighty-four railroad cars to carry it. There are 640 horses alone, besides the sixty cargo of animals. There are 1,250 people with the show and it takes on an average of $6,000 per day to run it. All of that money is paid out daily in cash for when a circus leaves town, there are no traces left as far as its business is concerned.

Therefore, aside from his personal and financial support Rickard could not have chosen—a better partner for McCracken's practical knowledge and experience with crowds is equal to anybody in the country. He has been in charge of the ticket sale almost exclusively and counts up with the treasurer each evening. To assist him he has two old circus men, Fred de Wolf, who is known as the fastest hard-ticket seller in the world, and Chick Bell.

Magnitude of Arcturus.

The star Arcturus, which is known to be a sun for a faraway system of planets, is 11,500,000 times farther removed from us than is our solar luminary. His diameter is 71,000,000 and his circumference about 224,000,000 miles. Our sun is but 866,000 miles in diameter, a fact which proves that Arcturus is at least 551,000 times greater in bulk than is our sun.

Made Over Frocks

It is not the fashion to make over our frocks nowadays.

We used to buy expensive materials and then have the frocks into which they were made remodeled and sometimes made over a second time. We don't do that nowadays usually. We buy poorer materials than we used to buy, and styles change more quickly than they used to change. Moreover, most people have fewer frocks than they used to have. They wear each frock continuously until it is worn out.

However, making over frocks often pays, and some dressmakers have lately been advertising their desire to make over frocks. These are expensive dressmakers, with high priced trades, and the frocks they make over are often imported models. They are real artists in the fashioning of fabrics into charming frocks, and they have the faculty of visualizing a remodeled frock after they have looked at and thought about the old frock for a little while.

This kind of remodeling surely pays. A practically new frock results, up to the last minute in its details. Nowadays a woman of fashion wears her frocks for such a short time that nobody remembers their colors and fabrics, and anyway, in remodeling, fabrics and colors are fashioned in different combinations from their original ones.

There are, for instance, the various jumper styles. The old material can be fashioned either into the jumper or into the blouse under it. Suppose there is an old black net frock. After it has been ripped and pressed and, if necessary, cleaned, the good separated from that which is torn, the net can be made into a blouse, with the best set in the sleeves and front. Then one can buy enough silk to make the jumper and the foundation of the skirt. There can be no flaring overskirt of the net, long or short, pointed or straight at the bottom, according to the amount of material.

There is also possibility for making over in the skirt with a very wide hem of contrasting material. Sleeves, or at least cuffs and collars, can be made of the same material as the hem, and new material may be bought either for this combination or for the rest of the frock.

Flemish Sausages.

These sausages are different from other kinds, and they are made in the following way: Take a pound of beef, a pound of pork, a pound of back fat (pork), half an ounce of brown sugar, a pinch of saltpeter, an ounce of salt, an eighth of an ounce of ground pimento and a quarter of an ounce of pepper. Mince the meat up finely, also the fat, add the seasoning, let it stand for a few hours, then add a pint of water in which a quarter of an ounce of strong tea has been infused, mix up well and fill into skins, or it can be made into little balls as large as walnuts. They are cooked on the stove and served for tea.

Asparagus Salad.

Roquefort dressing. Drain the liquid from a can of asparagus tips and put them on ice for half an hour. Then arrange on tender white leaves of a head of lettuce and pour over the salad dressing. Make the latter by using the recipe for French dressing, using lemon juice instead of vinegar, and adding two tablespoonfuls of Roquefort cheese mashed to a paste to the usual amount of salad dressing.

What Rust Is.

Nothing can rust unless it has iron in it. Rust is made by iron touching moist air. The oxygen in the moist air acts on the iron and forms what we call "oxide of iron," or rust, which crumbles away and spoils the iron.

VIRGINIA AND LILLA FINCH.

MOTHER IN DESPAIR SEEKS SOME ONE TO ADOPT DAUGHTERS.

New York, March 4.—Who wants to adopt two pretty little girls? Through the newspapers, Mrs. Edmund M. Finch is endeavoring to find a home for her two girls, twelve year old Virginia and ten year old Lilla. Her husband deserted her four years ago and since then the struggle for existence has been a real life battle for the woman. She is willing to separate herself from the children if she is assured of their future happiness. For herself she asks nothing.

Plumbing the depths of her emotions, Mrs. Finch, in a letter writes:

"I have fought Fate for nearly four years, trying to keep my little family together, but now I am ill and desperate, and can bear no more. I only want a home for my babies—a home where they will get a chance to grow into upright Christian women.

"For a week we have had little to eat. I can go hungry, but the sight of my little girls hungry and cold I cannot bear."

A Forgotten Existence

By ELEANOR MARSH

I was traveling on a railway train. Suddenly I felt a sharp pain in my head. Then I lost consciousness. When I came to myself I saw several persons standing about me, one, a woman, with a bottle of smelling salts in her hand. I tried to recall where I was going. I could not. Then I tried to recall from where I had come. I failed in this too. Doubtless I appeared dazed to those about me, for a woman said:

"She'll come all right presently. Give her a chance to collect her faculties."

After I had been asked a few questions I gave those about me to understand that I wished to be left alone, and one after the other they went to their seats. Then to my horror I found that I didn't know my own name. I didn't know my parents' name nor who they were. Everything beyond the present was lost in oblivion.

Would it all come back? I believed it would. But it did not. I looked in my purse and found tickets to a city and bank bills to the amount of $24, besides some silver. I searched among a few slips of paper hoping to see my name. There was not a word to suggest who I was.

Not caring to go into a large city in such a condition I got off at a suburban station. It was springtime. I passed a snug cottage, in the grounds of which were two little girls playing. I craved some one to speak to and preferred these innocents to any one else. The gate was open, and I entered the yard, calling to them to come to me. They did so, and I put an arm about each of them. I talked to them and they to me. I cared not what was said, I felt comfort in their company.

"Papa!"

One of the children looked up at some one entering the gateway. I followed the direction of her glance and saw a man about to enter. There was something so kindly in his face that I felt impelled to tell him my trouble and ask his advice as to what I should do. He listened to me, asked me a few questions, then said:

"Come into the house and we will see what can be done for you."

His household was run by an elderly woman. There was also a nurse for the children. He told the former to give me a room for the night, and he and I and the children dined together. After dinner he informed me of steps he proposed to take on the morrow to discover my identity, suggesting that I examine my clothing to discover if there was a mark that would help us. After dinner I went to my room and made the examination. There was nothing to give any clew.

Mr. Seagrave, the gentleman, telephoned an advertisement to a newspaper in the city describing me and the incident connected with me. He said he thought my relatives would be on the lookout for such a notice and I would hear from them very soon. He also gave me permission to remain in his house till I was claimed or my memory returned. I had enough money to pay my board for two or three weeks, but after that I would be penniless.

Time passed and no one claimed me. I wondered if I had any relatives. I judged that I was about twenty-one years old. Had I been married? If so my husband would doubtless move heaven and earth to find me.

When three weeks had gone by I tendered Mr. Seagrave my $24 for my keep and told him that it was all I had. He offered to discharge the nurse and make me the governess of his children. I gladly accepted.

A doctor who was called in to see me said that he was of the opinion my loss of memory had been occasioned either by a former sickness or trouble. I showed no sign of having been ill, and there was no evidence of a past trouble.

What I had been I knew not. I knew that I was very happy in Mr Seagrave's home. I loved the two little girls, and I grew to love him. A widower, he naturally pined for a woman's companionship. I had not been in his house a year before he asked me to marry him.

Alas! I knew not whether or no I was free to marry any one. There was a long struggle between my desire to be his wife and to mother his two dear little girls. He seemed to have made up his mind to take the chances himself, and at last I consented. We were married. He, I and the children were happy.

About two years after my marriage I awoke one morning after a long sleep my former self. It was a horrible awakening. I had married a man who had treated me brutally, and after a terrible scene I had caught up what money there was in the house and left him. He had married me in opposition to his parents' will and had thus given up a fortune.

I told Mr. Seagrave that my memory had returned, that our marriage was not legal. He bade me be comforted, that all would come out right. I gave him information to guide him, and he proceeded to look up the case.

One day soon after this he came home and took me in his arms, evidently very happy. He told me that my former husband had died and that his father had advertised for me. I went to see him, and he said he had sought me that he might make amends for his son's cruelty. He was very rich and at once settled a part of his fortune on me. When he died I received the rest.

What He Would Do.

"What would yo do, Jimson," asked Professor Brainfag, "if you saw a man fall dead in the street without apparent reason?" "I really wou n't know what to do, sir," answered the young student. "I think I should just let him lie there. It would certainly be wrong of any man to drop dead in the street without first giving his reasons for doing so."

Ready for Him.

George (nervously)—"Madge, dear, I am about to ask you to—" Madge (breaking in)—"Wait just a minute while I fix my hair." (She runs out of the room, and returns holding a dictagraph behind her.) "Speak loudly, dear, I've got a cold."—Siren.

LIVE STOCK NOTES.

Your horse may intend to please you, but does not understand your wishes.

Pigs give the quickest return for money invested, but carelessness and neglect will turn the profits to loss. This is no fault of the pigs.

At this season of the year a dry shelter should be provided for the sheep.

If there were fewer whips in the world there would be fewer ugly horses.

If the pigs are uneasy and squealing there is something wrong. Find out what it is.

Look after the sheep's feet once in awhile. They are apt to grow long and bothersome.

HANDLING BREEDING EWES IN COLD WEATHER

It is very important that the ewes of the flock be put in proper condition before lambing time, as otherwise the farmer or breeder can expect only a small percentage of lambs. There are two conditions that may result in the raising of a small percentage of lambs. First, many people have the impression that the ewes can be kept throughout the year on coarse, rough feeds with no grain except perhaps a small amount after lambing. The result is that the ewes, being thin at lambing time, produce weak lambs and do not produce enough milk to keep the lamb alive for the first few days. The second condition, in which the ewes are too fat, is far less common, but does occur. If the ewes have had the run of a good pasture during the summer they may be in very high condition in early winter. Then if rather heavy grain feeding is started early the ewes may become too fat for best results. In any flock of great size there is always much individual variation in the tendency of the ewes to put on fat. For this reason it is often advisable to divide the flock, putting the fatter ewes together and feeding them rather light until near lambing time. The ewes thin in condition should be fed enough to bring them to good breeding condition before lambing.

If the ewes are in good breeding condition in the fall and a good quality of roughage is fed no grain need be given until about three or four weeks before the beginning of the lambing season. The grain then given should consist of feeds that favor a good milk flow, as oats or bran. A mixture of the two should prove very satisfactory. Up to the time of lambing only about one-half to three-quarters of a pound per day need be fed.

After the lambing period the amount should be increased somewhat. The proper amount to feed then would depend on the size of the ewes, the percentage of lambs and other factors.

The question of roughage for ewes is a very important one. Alfalfa and clover hay are almost essential if the very best results are to be obtained. Very coarse fibrous hays, especially timothy, have been shown to be very objectionable as a roughage for pregnant ewes. Some form of succulent feed, as roots or corn silage, can be used to very great advantage if the cost is not prohibitive.

The feeding should not be the only consideration in the management of the flock, but the question of shelter and exercise are equally important. Close housing not only is not essential, but should be guarded against, and instead a more open house or shed should be provided. Warmth of the house is not an important consideration, for if kept dry the sheep's fleece will serve to keep the body warm. Care should be taken that the sheep do not have to stand around in damp, muddy places.—C. V. Singleton, Idaho Experiment Station.

Tankage For Pigs.

Tankage affords a splendid feed in connection with corn and when fed at the rate of one pound of tankage to eight to twelve pounds of corn will produce gains more economically than when corn is fed without the tankage. If tankage is not available shorts with a little oil meal will be a splendid fattening ration. Farmers feeding herds of forty to fifty shotes should remember to feed proportionately. A herd of fifty pigs will consume ten times as much as a litter of five, and feed should be given accordingly. Many farmers fail to realize this fact and do not give the hogs a sufficient amount to produce the gains that should be desired. When hogs attain a weight of 150 to 175 pounds they should be given all they will eat, for the faster they gain at this age the more profitable will be the gains.

Parasites In Sheep.

Sheep should have access to medicated salt in winter just as methodically as in summer, for in this way the breeding parasites that winter in the stomachs of mature sheep are largely destroyed. The source of drinking water for sheep is under the entire control of the feeder while the sheep are in dry lot, thus making it impossible for them to imbibe parasites with water, which in summer is very common. It is supposed that the parasite known as stomach worm survives the winter in the open field to some extent. Therefore the farmer who would keep his farm as free as possible from parasites should by all means use the winter season in systematically eradicating the parasites in the flock itself.

Sun Always Shining on America.

It is not only on the British empire that the sun never sets. It never sets on American soil. When it is 6 p. m. at Atto island, Alaska, it is 9:36 a. m. the next day on the eastern coast of Maine.

COSTLY INFIELD OF THE CHICAGO CUBS

Four Players Manager Tinker Has Selected for His Infield for Coming Season.

Manager Joe Tinker's infield will be one of the highest, if not the highest, paid combinations playing ball. The club manager has collected for his inner defense players who profited greatly by the baseball war. It is looked upon as the best-balanced infield in the National league and the strongest the club has had since the days of Steinfeldt, Tinker, Evers and Chance.

Heinie Zimmermann draws the biggest salary check of the infield. Vic Saier is next, Steve Yerkes third and Mike Doolan fourth. Not one of the quartet gets less than $5,000 a year. The total amount is $22,300.

STORY OF COLUMBIA COACH

Jim Rice Tells of Result of Efforts to Arouse Enthusiasm—Had Threatened to Quit.

Jim Rice, the Columbia university rowing coach, is telling a good story on himself these days. Rice has been endeavoring to arouse greater enthusiasm for rowing at Columbia and to down the report that he is about to quit because he can't get enough candiates to report for the crews.

"I went up to a big freshman and asked him why didn't he come out for the crew," said Rice.

"'What's the use?' he said. 'Haven't you heard the stories? Rice is going to leave.'

"'Leave? Who told you?'

"'Why, I got it from Rice direct.'"

Job for Trainer Hart.

Fred Hart, former Cub trainer, has accepted a similar position with the Brooklyn team of the National league.

SOCIETY NOTES.

The largest crowd that has ever attended a dance at Griffiths's Hall is expected to be present this evening at the dance to be given under the auspices of the Blue Ribbon Club of this city. An attractive program has been arranged.

The Thursday Night Pinochle Club met at the home of Robert Payne on John street this week. A. R. Pardee proved to be the best shark of the evening and was awarded first prize, the consolation prize being awarded to Theodore Wood. Hills, who is just learning the intricacies of the game, nearly robbed Mr. Pardee of the honors by his good playing.

The Misses Bessie House and Rachel Hoffman delightfully entertained a number of their friends at a private dance in Odd Fellows' Hall, Ulster Park, on Friday evening. The evening was thoroughly enjoyed by the forty couples present and at a late hour the guests departed declaring the hostesses royal entertainers. During the evening refreshments were served and a general good time enjoyed. A numbr of guests were present from Kingston, Brooklyn, Esopus and other nearby places.

Henrietta Wynkoop Guild.

The Henrietta Wynkoop Guild of the First Dutch Church will hold their regular meeting at the home of Mrs. Caroline Holmes, No. 208 Albany avenue, on Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Delightfully Surprised.

Friday evening a number of school chums of Miss Helen Brodhead most delightfully surprised her at the home of her sister, Mrs. James C. Legg, of 50 Hunter street. During the evening piano selections were rendered by Miss Mildred Messinger, Miss Gertrude Eberson and the hostess, Miss Brodhead. Some of the most popular pieces were also played on the Victrola. Dancing, games and other amusements were indulged in. Dainty refreshments were served.

Enjoyable Dance.

St. John's parish house presented a very attractive appearance last evening for the "As You Like It" dance given by the young ladies of the Kijkuit Club. American flags and handsome college pennants which the girls loaned for the occasion, were artistically arranged. The dance, which was an enjoyable affair, was chaperoned by Miss Helena Clearwater of the club, Mrs. Albert Hart and Mrs. Brigham. It is thought that a neat sum was realized for charitable work.

James L. DuBois, a life long resident of Marlborough, was suddenly stricken with apoplexy while at his work on Wednesday evening. Mr. DuBois was a contracting carpenter and was stricken while at work on the residence of F. E. McCarthy on the Monisunk Farm on the Lattingtown road. Dr. A. H. Palmer was quickly summoned but Mr. DuBois died shortly after the doctor reached his side. He was removed to his home on the Ridge road from where the funeral will be held at 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon. The deceased was 56 years of age and is survived by his wife, Ella Mackey, and four brothers and one sister: Mrs. Oscar Bloomer, Lyman, George and Oscar, who reside in Marlborough, and Dimmick, who lives in Middle Hope. The interment will be made in the Riverside cemetery in Marlborough.

George Waring Hendricks died at his home in New Jersey on Thursday morning, and the remains were brought to Saugerties for interment today. He was a brother-in-law of Miss Rachel and William Decker, and a cousin of Howard Hendricks of this city. He was an Ulster county boy, having been born here in 1839. He was a son of Benjamin Hendricks, who ran the old steamer Norwich as captain in 1846 when she was plying between Rondout and New York as a night passenger boat. He was a nephew of the late Col. J. T. Hendricks, who was the superintendent of the Delaware & Hudson Canal at the Rondout terminal for many years, and later supervisor of the old town of Kingston. The family soon after moved to the old Waring homestead in the town of Lloyd, where Mr. Hendricks lived for many years, teaching the district school and music in that section. Later they moved to Hoboken, N. J., when Mr. Hendricks engaged in business in New York for a time successfully. He was a devoted Christian man and active in the Methodist Church all his life. For a time he was an occasional correspondent of the Kingston Argus and the Kingston Leader. During the early half of his life he was an inveterate user of tobacco in every form. While living in Hoboken he gave up this habit absolutely in a single night, attributing this achievement to prayer. In speaking of this he said while visiting a prominent Methodist family of his acquaintance there one evening the lady said to him, "George, why don't you give up this filthy tobacco habit? Do you know what my little boy says when I tell him he must never learn to smoke or chew tobacco when he grows up? He says, 'Well, Mamma, George does it, you know, and see what a good Christian man he is.' "This," Mr. Hendricks said, "smote me to the heart at once. To think that I was such an example to this young boy. Before I left that house that night I handed over my pipe and tobacco box to this lady and promised her that never again would I smoke or chew tobacco. I went home, and before going to bed I knelt down and asked the Lord to help me keep this resolution. And from that day to this I have never touched tobacco and I now hate the smell of it." This story was published in the New York Tribune at the time under a sarcastic headline which was widely copied in the press, the Brooklyn Eagle devoting an editorial to the item, all in a facetious vein. But the story was absolutely true, and Mr. Hendricks died a hater of tobacco.

Alaska's Natural Submarines.

The channels of the Alaskan waterways vary as you sail on to the northward. Now they widen into great lakes; now they are rivers as narrow as the Hudson or Rhine. At times you pass through gorges walled by islands and the mainland, and at times you are in fiords like those formed by the half sunken Andes along western Patagonia, near the strait of Magellan. This part of our territory is made up of the heads of submerged mountains, and in places there are great rocks as steep, as high and as sharp as the Washington monument, which come within twenty or thirty feet of the surface. These are terrible pinnacle rocks that rip open the hulls of the steamers. They are searched for and marked with buoys by the wire drag of our coast and geodetic survey.—Christian Herald.

Canny Human Skill.

The ocean comes up and smashes our beaches and our piers; the wind blows down old houses and walls and trees; the rain fills up creek beds and basements and comes up over the floors of stores, with some damage to silks and sugar. It is all very big and scary and horrendous, but still the puny human climbs quietly into his dry street car, the antlike commuter crawls aboard his chip sized ferryboat, the steamer swings and dances through the typhoon, and the cigar box office building laughs at the racket and the fuss. There is skill behind the car, the boat, the building; canny human skill that keeps cool and is not to be bluffed even by the winds and waters of the earth, and nature may lose its temper all it wants; it loses it quite fruitlessly.—San Francisco Bulletin.

Resonance of Jade.

The remarkable resonance of jade is a peculiar quality, which gives it great importance in Chinese estimation; to such an extent that "singers' chimes" of twenty-four different pieces and tones were sometimes constructed. Occasional use is also made of the natural form of the jade bowlders, which are found in river beds.

Two Inscriptions.

The Pharos lighthouse, built in 283 B. C., during the reign of Ptolemy Philadelphus of Alexandria, when finished bore the legend: "King Ptolemy to the gods, the saviors, for the benefit of sailors," which presently crumbled off, having been formed in mortar by the builder Sostrates, and beneath, carved in the rock itself, appeared the following: "Sostrates the Cnidian, son of Dexiphanes, to the gods, the saviors, etc.

To Cover Scratches.

To cover scratches on furniture and at the same time to collect all dust, rub with a soft cloth which has been well moistened with the following mixture. Equal parts of cider vinegar, turpentine and linseed oil. Put the three in a bottle, shake well, and it is ready for use. It may be kept for any length of time. This is fine to use on varnished floors; it keeps them glossy and preserves the varnish.

The Suicide Age.

Farm and Garden

THE FARM WOOD LOT.

Forest Culture Is an Art the Farmer Should Cultivate.

Forest culture is as much of an art as is corn culture. A good wood lot, like a good cornfield, is the result of applying intelligent methods to produce a full, valuable crop. A cornfield with fail spots, empty hills, feeble stalks and half filled ears is neither a credit to the farm nor a paying investment for the farmer. No more is a wood lot half stocked with inferior trees. When timber is cut is the time of all times to apply forestry. The way in which the cutting is done will determine what the subsequent condition of the wood lot will be.

There is a difference between farm woodland and the farm wood lot. Farm woodland is farm land which has not yet been cleared. Farm wood lot is a term which might best be used to mean a part of a farm permanently devoted to timber production, under a sound plan of farm management. The size and the location of the wood lot will depend upon various considerations, of which the most important are the home needs of the farm, the character of the land and the present and prospective market for materials from the wood lot.

SIMPLE WAY TO TEST SOILS.

Many Farmers Waste Years Trying to Farm Sour Lands.

Buy a few cents' worth of hydrochloric acid, also litmus paper at the druggist's. Then test the various soils on your farm. With a spade or large augur take a soil sample to a depth of seven inches, mixing it well, writes L. C. Leit in the Orange Judd Farmer.

Now, with a handful of this moist sample make a saucer shaped form. Pour in a little of the acid, being careful not to drop any on your hands or clothes, as it burns. If the result is quite free bubbling or effervescence it shows that the soil contains considerable limestone, but little or no foaming indicates deficiency of lime. Make this test with soil known to be rich in lime or with a sample to which you have added lime, then with soil poor in lime and you will see the difference distinctly. Now, make a ball of moist earth from another handful of the same sample of soil, break it in two, lay on one part a bit of the blue litmus paper, leave for a few moments, then open the ball again. If the blue paper has turned red the soil is sour or acid and probably quite deficient in lime. If it keeps red after drying the soil is very sour. If the blue paper does not change color then test the soil moisture with red litmus paper. If it turns blue the soil is alkali and not sour.

No amount of reading or talking will teach you half as much as for you to make these tests yourself. Many farmers waste years trying to farm sour land or that poor in lime, whereas by testing it in this easy way they can see at once what it needs.

POULTRY IN WINTER.

Look out for sudden severe spells. See that the henhouse is closed tight when a norther shows its nose.

One cold night is sufficient to freeze the combs of all your fowls and spoil them for the show at which you intended to exhibit them.

It avails nothing to bewail the fact that the poultry house doors were not closed the night of the storm after the damage has been done. Shutting the doors before the storm comes is what counts.

Success in poultry culture is simply the result of looking after all the little details connected with the business. Any one can be successful if he will use a little diligence and common sense.

A hot mash on a cold winter morning is a good thing to give the chickens. Still, it is not wise to give them all they will eat of the mash, for if you do they will be apt to sit around after they are filled and become chilled with inactivity. On the contrary, give them about half a feed of mash and scatter small grain in the litter, so that they may be kept warm by scratching for the seeds. This will keep them active and healthy and consequently profitable.

KINGSTON, N. Y., MARCH 4, 1916.

Another great "victory" was won by President Wilson yesterday, according to his admiring supporters. He had demanded that Congress take some positive action showing that it was behind him in his stand for American rights on the sea, so that foreign powers might no longer suspect him of misrepresenting his country's sentiment. In response to this the Senate voted by a majority of four to one to lay on the table a resolution reciting that "whereas the right of American citizens to travel on armed belligerent vessels rather than upon unarmed vessels is essential neither to their life, liberty or safety; nor to the independence, dignity or security of the United States," therefore be it resolved "that the sinking by a submarine without notice or warning of an armed merchant vessel of her public enemy, resulting in the death of a citizen of the United States, would constitute a just and sufficient cause of war between the United States and the German Empire." That sounds like the remarks of a half-witted man in delirium. It is hard to see how anybody could be blamed much for voting either way on the question to table such a resolution. Senator Smoot, who always thinks rationally, declined to vote at all on what he called "a question that means nothing." Yet papers like the New York Times are simply gloating over the "victory." Today it is expected that the House will follow the Senate's example, after which more red fire will be touched off. After this, the Kaiser will be more careful how he trifles with the wishes of a President who can command such whole-hearted, enthusiastic support.

Mark Twain's famous remark that the report of his death was "greatly exaggerated" is recalled by the letter received from a former Kingston resident who denies the published report of his death. It is "news" of "deaths" of this character and their subsequent denials that give conscientious editors gray hair and hurry them to an early grave. In so important a thing as death, which happens only once to the average human being, as we are led to believe, some degree of accuracy should be insisted upon. The newspapers cannot be blamed for publishing items vouched for by the immediate relatives but the spectacle of men turning up at what was supposedly their personal funerals has occurred so often that it is no longer news. It is too much to ask any man to stay "dead" even in the interest of newspaper accuracy, but certainly more care could be exercised in a multitude of instances. Premature reports of death cause no end of annoyance and seriously affect the standing of the newspaper, the innocent third party in such cases.

In Brooklyn, where Dr. David Allyn Gorton, an eighty-three year-old authority on eugenics, died a fortnight ago, his widow is hopefully waiting for his return in the spirit to advise her upon the momentous question of who shall be entrusted with the publication of two books on the science of eugenicology which he left as a legacy to his family. The family consists of twins, David and Leonora, three years old, and it is in hourly expectation of their father's return that the mother waits. This is a new side to eugenics. Advice from the spirit world would certainly be appreciated in many other things besides the printing of books. For instance, if the doctor could establish a means of communicaing with this sphere, the twins would have a remarkable start in life with an octogenarian experience in two worlds to guide them. This would, indeed, be a triumph for the new cult. The only barrier in sight is the length of time before the communication system gets into operation. Somebody has said it is the province of woman to wait. In this instance, the widow's province seems likely to be extended unless some resourceful publisher appreciates the value of the advance advertising already given the works in question.

Arbor Day observances are to be changed this year into celebrations of the tercentenary of Shakespeare's death in many of the public schools of the State—surely an appropriate form for such an observance to take. English folk dances and some tableaux representative of Shakespeare's works are among the suggestions named by the United States Bureau of Education for this occasion, which could be carried out with comparatively little trouble by school authorities. Anything which makes for student interest in Shakespeare deserves attention for modern tendencies to cheap movies and other distractions are away from the best in literature and the drama. Whether school pupils dance in honor of the immortal bard, or whether they take part in a pageant or some simpler exhibition portraying Shakespeare's genius, makes no difference. Their celebration of the tercentenary will serve to stir anew an interest in the subject and works which have stood the test of three centuries—a thing quite as important in itself as the planting of a tree or two in a bare corner of a school-yard.

The Little Matter.

A certain captain of industry, complimented on an immense war contract, said in New York:

"One beauty about these contracts is their strict honesty. There are no palms to grease.

"It wasn't always so in war contracts. In fact, they tell a story about a war contractor who once broke the silence of his club reading with a dreadful sigh.

"'What's the matter?' a brother contractor asked.

"'Alas, alas!' said the first contractor: 'I've just bought 5,000,000 pairs of shoes at $1 a pair and sold them to the army for $6, and I'm afraid the loss with ruin me.'

"'Loss? Loss?' said the other contractor. 'What are you talking about, man? On 5,000,000 pairs of shoes, with a five-dollar profit, how can there be a loss?'

"'My dear fellow,' said the first contractor, sadly, 'you forget the little matter of commissions.'"—New York Times.

His Job.

There was once a rich but very mean old lady who paid her servants as little as possible, and kept very few.

One of her staff was a thin, miserable looking lad of 12, who answered the door, did the knives and the windows, waited at table, weeded the garden, washed the poodle, and had the rest of the time to himself.

One visitor asked him: "Well, my boy, and what do you do here?"

"I do a butler and a gardener out of a job!" snapped the lad, sourly.—Tit-Bits.

"Can you tell how many eggs a man can eat on an empty stomach?"

"No, Mr. Tambo, I cannot. Will you tell us how many?"

"One, because after that his stomach wouldn't be empty."

"'Who is this chap, Shakespeare, anyway?'

"'He was a writer, sir.'

"'Oh, but there are lots of writers. Why do you make such an infernal fuss over this one, then? Wherever I turn I see Shakespeare hotels, Shakespeare cakes, Shakespeare chocolates, Shakespeare shoes. What the deuce did he write—magazine stories, attacks on the government, shady novels?'

No, sir, oh, no, sir,' said the aged villager. 'I understand he writ for the Bible, sir.'"—Boston Post.

CAREFUL WORK

There is only one kind of optical work that is satisfactory—and that is the careful, exacting skilled service of the experienced optometrist.

Careless or hurried work or the service of the untrained or incompetent often results in serious injury to the vision besides worry, pain or inconvenience.

Your eyes will be examined carefully, and correct glasses made in our own factory if you come to see us.

MENKE'S DAILY SPORTING LETTER

(By Frank G. Menke.)

In days of old when fighters bold,
Were filled with battle-lust;
They never sought nor had a thought
Of gathering the dust.
But in these days the fighters' ways
Have changed from times of old,
And they won't scrap a single tap
Unless for tons of gold.

Much Depends on Fight.

The Moran-Willard fight on the 25th either will make or permanently break the fighting game in the New York district.

The Gothamites have stood for so much in the way of pugilistic burlesque that they have reached the limit of their endurance powers. They are groggy. If the heavyweight battle proves to be a fiasco, it will be a knockout blow.

But should that affair develop into a real battle from the beginning to the end it will revive the game here. The public wants—but hardly dares hope for—a slam-bang battle with action every minute of the way. It wants a battle of the old kind—free hitting, fierce rushing—and no stalling.

If Moran and Willard fight that way, they'll act as saviours of the game here. If they don't, they'll act as its executioners.

Willard's Deceptive Weight.

The folks here find it hard to believe that Jess Willard beams only 272½ pounds, fully garbed, at the present time. That was the figure announced after the champion had been weighed in secretly.

"That boxing commission ain't got no reason for cheating 10 or 20 pounds in Willard's weight, but, by golly, I'd bet my next week's salary of $18 that Willard weighs over 275 stripped," piped up one of the "regulars" at Willard's training camp in the Pioneer A. C.

Looking at Willard from the waist up, it certainly does seem that he carries more than the 265 pounds net which is credited to him—but then look at Willard's legs. There's your answer. If his pedals were proportionately as huge as his torso, the champion surely would weigh around 275 in fighting condition. But his legs, especially the lower part of them, are quite slim for so huge a man.

Willard's pins are thinner than those of Jack Johnson, and thinner than those of most heavyweights in the game. But they weren't that way always. Once upon a time they were fat and quite flabby. That made Willard as clumsy as a sea-sick Swede. But in the past year he has been paying a lot of attention to those legs, and has reduced them to skin and bone and muscle.

Sparring Partners Too Gentle.

The heavyweight king would make a hit with the crowds that watch him in his daily workouts if he annexed a new sparring partner, one who wasn't quite as gentle as Jack Hemple and Walter Monohan.

Both men worked with him during the long grind preliminary to his Havana fight. Willard, through constant sparring with them, has come to know just how they hit—and wath they've got. Their shifts and swings are an open book to him, and because of this they don't give him as much of an argument as the fans would like to see.

Furthermore, both men are careful not to wound the champion. They slam him and they bang him—but they never put real force behind their swings, even though they use gloves so heavily padded they are almost as soft as pillows.

Black and white and novelty checks hold a popular place among the smart materials of the season. They are used often in the street and semi-tailored suits, proving not only attractive but also practical. One very distinctive suit developed in this checked material was relieved by a touch of rose faille silk. The skirt is gored and very wide. The Directoire collar of self material is new and smart in that it may roll softly away from the throat, or lay flat.

Bids on Bridge in April.

Indications would seem to point to the fact that the work of building the bridge across the Rondout creek will really be started this year. A local contractor, who was in Albany recently, said that he learned that the state highway department expected to include the work of building the bridge in the spring lettings and that bids would be asked some time in April.

Wurts St. C. E. Society.

The Wurts Street Baptist Endeavorers held their every month business meeting last evening. Following the business session a social hour was enjoyed. A pleasing program of musical selections and readings was presented by young people from the Sunday school, who were on this occasion, the guests of the C. E. Society.

HUB PERDUE HAS GONE

Passing of Baseball Comedian and Pitcher Is Regretted.

True Son of Dixie and Born to Bask in Warmth of Sunshine—Probably Worst Batter in Game and the Best Story Teller.

The passing of Hub Perdue, who has forsaken the baseball arena to assume charge of his property in Texas is regretted by fan and player alike. Hub is a true son of Dixie, born to bask in the warmth of the sunshine, and it was the great misfortune of his life that he was forced to spend the greater portion of his major league career as a member of the Braves in cold, bleak Boston.

Hub is no less famous for his ability to tell a good story than he is for his strength in the pitcher's box or his ludicrous weakness at the plate. Perdue was probably the worst batter in the history of baseball, and the best story teller. Here is a yarn spun by Hub at the time of his transfer from the Braves, then a joke aggregation, to the St. Louis Cards.

"Sah, I done heard a gentleman remark as how these yere Braves were a fighting team. Huh! Why the only thing I ever saw 'um fight was the ball. Yas, sah, dat's so. I'm jus' a'gwine to tell you all that they was ferocious like an oyster. Suttenly they was the perlitest lot of ball players I ever see.

"One day down yonder in Pittsburgh I was a'-pitching my head off and the sco' was 5 to 2 agin us. Come our half of the seventh and the fust three batters get on. It was my turn to hit, and I figures I'm dife cause I ain't had no hit since the spring befo'. I went a'-running fo' my bat and, man alive, I spe'ct I'd jus' 'bout make a home run and be a hero. I gits my war club and starts fo' the plate when I detects the Pittsburgh players caming in, an' all a-laughin'.

"Yas, sah. Dog my cats if ever one of those base runners hadn't done gone and let those Pittsburgh fellows push 'um offen the bags and tag 'um out. And worser still, everyone that was ketched was 'pologizing for bein' in the way an' interfering."

She Is Always to Blame.

Of what use is it discussing whether men or women will do the sillier things to maintain a pose? We all know—or ought to, perhaps—that when the woman buys a twelve dollar pair of white kid boots that are unsuitable to wear with anything else that she can afford she is herself to blame; and when a man mortgages his farm to buy an automobile that he cannot afford to run it is the women of the family who are to blame; and there you are!—"As She Sees It," in Lowell Courier-Citizen.

Submarine Wonders of Hawaii.

Nowhere in this wide world are there such rainbow fish as in Hawaii, of every color and shade and hue. If there is any tint or grandeur of tints in the prism that is not reflected in the scales of the finny tribes in the waters around the islands I should like to see it. A visit to the Honolulu aquarium (far superior as it is to the world famous one in Naples), or to the Coral gardens, where we see the fish through a glass bottomed boat, disporting themselves in their own front yards, so to speak, is well worth while.—Christian Herald.

KINGSTON CIRCLES' WORK COMMENDED

That the women of Kingston are doing their part toward the relief of suffering among the wounded of the allies, is plainly shown by the following letter from Miss Carita Spencer, national chairman of the Surgical Dressings Committee. The letter has just been received by the secretary of the Circles of Mercy of Kingston, and is as follows:

Among the many thousands of surgical dressings which are daily being received at the New York headquarters of the Surgical Dressings Committee, those in the boxes from Kingston stand out pre-eminent for accuracy of workmanship and excellence of quality. The work which is being done by the Circles of Mercy of Kingston, proves that the women of that city have the right sort of enthusiasm to carry on this much needed war relief work.

The Kingston committee has sent thousands of dressings, each made in accordance with special directions. These dressings have gone to the distributing bureaus in France, and from there are requisitioned by the needy hospitals. Each hospital requests and receives the kind and quantity of dressings needed for its patients at the moment. In this way there is no danger of our sending large absorbent pads particularly adapted for serious fresh wounds where a hospital has only convalescent patients and vice versa. Within the last few months, the Paris distributing bureau has supplied about 350 different hospitals. This does not include the repeated requests which are always filled before a request from a new hospital on the list is attended to. The Bordeaux bureau has supplied over 100 hospitals. If there is any doubt in the mind of anyone as to the pressing need for this kind of help from the women of America, a glance at the numerous letters of appreciation and thanks which have been received at the New York headquarters, would dispel this. Furthermore, two members of our committee have already visited France and assured themselves of the value of this work.

The National Surgical Dressings Committee is now a well developed organization, having about 700 subcommittees throughout the United States, and many states organized under state chairmen. Mrs. Edward R. Hewitt of New York city has very recently accepted the chairmanship of New York state. Notable among these sub-committees is the Circles of Mercy of Kingston which has contributed so generously in time, material and labor. It is hoped that the membership of this Kingston committee will continue to grow, that before long every woman in that city will have gone through her rag-bag and taken her old linen and cotton to be made into surgical dressings. The spring drive in the war zone will soon be on and then think of the conditions of the hospitals.

A shipment of about 30,000 dressings goes out on the French line every Saturday, the bulk of it to the Paris and Bordeaux bureaus and a few cases to special addresses. This week's shipment, going out on the S. S. Espagne, totals over 34,000 and has cases for the Princess of Belgium, Princess Alice of Greece at Salonika, several special French hospitals and two English ones. Also a box for the Canadian boys at Shonecliffe, England. In some one of these boxes, Kingston is represented. The longer this disastrous war lasts the greater will become the need for help from neutral nations. We hope that Kingston will stand by the Surgical Dressings Committee with ever increasing effort.

CARITA SPENCER,
National Chairman.

As the result of the visit of Mrs. Mary Hatch Willard of New York to this city last Saturday, and her eloquent address in behalf of the Circles of Mercy, given at the chapel of the First Dutch Church, there was an unusually enthusiastic and effective meeting of the local organization held at the Y. In the Days of Youth.

"Children's affairs become important the moment an adult discusses them in their presence. Questions of lying, deceit, morality, self-defense and the like should never be taken up in advance of the need. The Boston woman who told her children 'never to put beans in their ears,' which they promptly did, is sure to understand me. Experimental lies start in this way, and gain great headway, for the parent who anticipates them is always on the lookout and is generally rewarded."—Exchange.

For a Sore Throat.

A cleansing gargle for the throat when suffering from tonsilitis or an attack of quinsy can be prepared from bicarbonate of soda. Dissolve a heaping teaspoonful of bicarbonate of soda in a coffee cup of boiling water and add to this two drops of the essence of peppermint. Use the gargle while it is quite hot—not enough to burn the throat. Repeat the treatment every four hours. Do not go out of doors after using a gargle, as there is danger of aggravating the condition in the throat.

Optimistic Thought.

Instinct and reason are the difference between man and the brute.

The "Dog Letter."

The letter "R" was called the "dog letter" by the ancients because the manner in which they pronounced it resembled to a degree the snarling of a dog. It is the last letter that most children learn to pronounce. They use "w" instead, saying "wewy" for very, or "Wobert" for Robert. The Chinese invariably use "l" in the place of "r," which they cannot pronounce.

Calendars Long in Use.

The Egyptian calendar, fixing the length of the year at 365 days, was adopted a little more than 4,300 years before Christ. Of course it took a pretty high civilization, which in this case means an old one, to arrive at such a calendar. Scholars agree that some Chaldean inscriptions date from fifty to seventy centuries B. C., and no one pretends that the oldest of these mementoes have been found.

SAM McCRACKEN.

SAM MCCRACKEN SPEAKS.

New York, March 4.—While much has been said and written about Tex Rickard, Tom Jones, Ike Dorgan and even Frank Moran and Jess Willard, all connected with the big fight to be staged on March 25, comparatively little about Sam McCracken who with Rickard is promoting the bout, has been put before the reading public.

The other day McCracken took a few minutes off to tell a newspaper man all about himself.

"As a boy," said Mr. McCracken, "I lived about a hundred and fifty miles outside of St. Louis. My father was in the horse and mule business and at the age of twelve, I used to take two and three carloads of cattle into the St. Louis markets. Later we moved to Kansas City, but dad remained in the same game. It was the horse business that first brought Tex and me together and ours has been a friendship of many years.

"I was twenty years old when I joined the Ringling Brothers. That's just twenty years ago, he said with a faraway smile. "For ten years I acted as the general representative for them, but for the past six years I have devoted my efforts to the Barnum & Bailey show acting as manager.

"I have been trying to get out of the game, but somehow the Ringlings want me to stick. To be honest with you, I am not absolutely certain about it now. I have been in every city in America, and and Canada with a population of 5,000 and up. Of course, there is a heap of hard work to it, but there is too, a certain amount of pleasure. There are a thousand different situations to be met each day, and it requires more attention than any other business I know."

What managing a circus means, the average layman has no idea. But let it be known that it is one of the biggest jobs ever devised. For instance, the Barnum & Bailey show takes eighty-four railroad cars to carry it. There are 640 horses alone, besides the sixty cargo of animals. There are 1,250 people with the show and it takes on an average of $6,000 per day to run it. All of that money is paid out daily in cash for when a circus leaves town, there are no traces left as far as its business is concerned.

Therefore, aside from his personal and financial support Rickard could not have chosen—a better partner for McCracken's practical knowledge and experience with crowds is equal to anybody in the country. He has been in charge of the ticket sale almost exclusively and counts up with the treasurer each evening. To assist him he has two old circus men, Fred de Wolf, who is known as the fastest hard-ticket seller in the world, and Chick Bell.

Magnitude of Arcturus.

The star Arcturus, which is known to be a sun for a faraway system of planets, is 31,500,000 times farther removed from us than is our solar luminary. His diameter is 71,000,000 and his circumference about 224,000,000 miles. Our sun is but 866,000 miles in diameter, a fact which proves that Arcturus is at least 351,980 times greater in bulk than is our sun.

Made Over Frocks

It is not the fashion to make over our frocks nowadays.

We used to buy expensive materials and then have the frocks into which they were made remodeled and sometimes made over a second time. We don't do that nowadays usually. We buy poorer materials than we used to buy, and styles change more quickly than they used to change. Moreover, most people have fewer frocks than they used to have. They wear each frock continuously until it is worn out.

However, making over frocks often pays, and some dressmakers have lately been advertising their desire to make over frocks. These are expensive dressmakers, with high priced trades, and the frocks they make over are often imported models. They are real artists in the fashioning of fabrics into charming frocks, and they have the faculty of visualizing a remodeled frock after they have looked at and thought about the old frock for a little while.

This kind of remodeling surely pays. A practically new frock results, up to the last minute in its details. Nowadays a woman of fashion wears her frocks for such a short time that nobody remembers their colors and fabrics, and anyway, in remodeling, fabrics and colors are fashioned in different combinations from their original ones.

There are, for instance, the various jumper styles. The old material can be fashioned either into the jumper or into the blouse under it. Suppose there is an old black net frock. After it has been ripped and pressed and, if necessary, cleaned, the good separated [illegible] that which is torn, the net can [illegible] into a blouse, with the best [illegible] in the sleeves and front. Then [illegible] can buy enough silk to make the jumper and the foundation of the skirt. There can be no flaring overskirt of the net, long or short, pointed or straight at the bottom, according to the amount of material.

There is also possibility for making over in the skirt with a very wide hem of contrasting material. Sleeves, or at least cuffs and collars, can be made of the same material as the hem, and new material may be bought either for this combination or for the rest of the frock.

SIMPLE BEAUTY.

yest, a pointed tunic, snug cuffs and a banded skirt are all good points. This model will be beautiful in any of the novelty taffetas.

Flemish Sausages.

These sausages are different from other kinds, and they are made in the following way: Take a pound of beef, a pound of pork, a pound of back fat (pork), half an ounce of brown sugar, a pinch of saltpeter, an ounce of salt, an eighth of an ounce of ground pimento and a quarter of an ounce of pepper. Mince the meat up finely, also the fat, add the seasoning, let it stand for a few hours, then add a pint of water in which a quarter of an ounce of strong tea has been infused, mix up well and fill into skins, or it can be made into little balls as large as walnuts. They are cooked on the stove and served for tea.

Asparagus Salad.

Roquefort dressing. Drain the liquid from a can of asparagus tips and put them on ice for half an hour. Then arrange on tender white leaves of a head of lettuce and pour over the salad dressing. Make the latter by using the recipe for French dressing, using lemon juice instead of vinegar, and adding two tablespoonfuls of Roquefort cheese mashed to a paste to the usual amount of salad dressing.

What Rust Is.

Nothing can rust unless it has iron in it. Rust is made by iron touching moist air. The oxygen in the moist air acts on the iron and forms what we call "oxide of iron," or rust, which crumbles away and spoils the iron.

VIRGINIA AND LILLA FINCH.

MOTHER IN DESPAIR SEEKS SOME ONE TO ADOPT DAUGHTERS.

New York, March 4.—Who wants to adopt two pretty little girls? Through the newspapers, Mrs. Edmund M. Finch is endeavoring to find a home for her two girls, twelve year old Virginia and ten year old Lilla. Her husband deserted her four years ago and since then the struggle for existence has been a real life battle for the woman. She is willing to separate herself from the children if she is assured of their future happiness. For herself she asks nothing.

Plumbing the depths of her emotions, Mrs. Finch, in a letter writes:

"I have fought Fate for nearly four years, trying to keep my little family together, but now I am ill and desperate, and can bear no more. I only want a home for my babies—a home where they will get a chance to grow into upright Christian women.

"For a week we have had little to eat. I can go hungry, but the sight of my little girls hungry and cold I cannot bear."

A Forgotten Existence

By ELEANOR MARSH

I was traveling on a railway train. Suddenly I felt a sharp pain in my head. Then I lost consciousness. When I came to myself I saw several persons standing about me, one, a woman, with a bottle of smelling salts in her hand. I tried to recall where I was going. I could not. Then I tried to recall from where I had come. I failed in this too. Doubtless I appeared dazed to those about me, for a woman said:

"She'll come all right presently. Give her a chance to collect her faculties."

After I had been asked a few questions I gave those about me to understand that I wished to be left alone, and one after the other they went to their seats. Then to my horror I found that I didn't know my own name. I didn't know my parents' name nor who they were. Everything beyond the present was lost in oblivion.

Would it all come back? I believed it would. But it did not. I looked in my purse and found tickets to a city and bank bills to the amount of $24, besides some silver. I searched among a few slips of paper hoping to see my name. There was not a word to suggest who I was.

Not caring to go into a large city in such a condition I got off at a suburban station. It was springtime. I passed a snug cottage, in the grounds of which were two little girls playing. I craved some one to speak to and preferred these innocents to any one else. The gate was open, and I entered the yard, calling to them to come to me. They did so, and I put an arm about each of them. I talked to them and they to me. I cared not what was said, I felt comfort in their company.

"Papa!"

One of the children looked up at some one entering the gateway. I followed the direction of her glance and saw a man about to enter. There was something so kindly in his face that I felt impelled to tell him my trouble and ask his advice as to what I should do. He listened to me, asked me a few questions, then said:

"Come into the house and we will see what can be done for you."

His household was run by an elderly woman. There was also a nurse for the children. He told the former to give me a room for the night, and he and I and the children dined together. After dinner he informed me of steps he proposed to take on the morrow to discover my identity, suggesting that I examine my clothing to discover if there was a mark that would help us. After dinner I went to my room and made the examination. There was nothing to give any clew.

Mr. Seagrave, the gentleman, telephoned an advertisement to a newspaper in the city describing me and the incident connected with me. He said he thought my relatives would be on the lookout for such a notice and I would hear from them very soon. He also gave me permission to remain in his house till I was claimed or my memory returned. I had enough money to pay my board for two or three weeks, but after that I would be penniless.

Time passed and no one claimed me. I wondered if I had any relatives. I judged that I was about twenty-one years old. Had I been married? If so my husband would doubtless move heaven and earth to find me.

When three weeks had gone by I tendered Mr. Seagrave my $24 for my keep offered to discharge the nurse and make me the governess of his children. I gladly accepted.

A doctor who was called in to see me said that he was of the opinion my loss of memory had been occasioned either by a former sickness or trouble. I showed no sign of having been ill, and there was no evidence of a past trouble.

What I had been I knew not. I knew that I was very happy in Mr. Seagrave's home. I loved the two little girls, and I grew to love him. A widower, he naturally pined for a woman's companionship. I had not been in his house a year before he asked me to marry him.

Alas! I knew not whether or no I was free to marry any one. There was a long struggle between my desire to be his wife and to mother his two dear little girls. He seemed to have made up his mind to take the chances himself, and at last I consented. We were married. He, I and the children were happy.

About two years after my marriage I awoke one morning after a long sleep my former self. It was a horrible awakening. I had married a man who had treated me brutally, and after a terrible scene I had caught up what money there was in the house and left him. He had married me in opposition to his parents' will and had thus given up a fortune.

I told Mr. Seagrave that my memory had returned, that our marriage was not legal. He bade me be comforted, that all would come out right. I gave him information to guide him, and he proceeded to look up the case.

One day soon after this he came home and took me in his arms, evidently very happy. He told me that my former husband had died and that his father had advertised for me. I went to see him, and he said he had sought me that he might make amends for his son's cruelty. He was very rich and at once settled a part of his fortune on me. When he died I received the rest.

What He Would Do.

"What would yo do, Jimson," asked Professor Brainfag, "if you saw a man fall dead in the street without apparent reason?" "I really wou n't know what to do, sir," answered the young student. "I think I should just let him lie there. It would certainly be wrong of any man to drop dead in the street without first giving his reasons for doing so."

Ready for Him.

George (nervously)—"Madge, dear, I am about to ask you to—" Madge (breaking in)—"Wait just a minute while I fix my hair." (She runs out of the room, and returns holding a dictagraph behind her.) "Speak loudly, dear, I've got a cold."—Siren.

LIVE STOCK NOTES.

Your horse may intend to please you, but does not understand your wishes.

Pigs give the quickest return for money invested, but carelessness and neglect will turn the profits to loss. This is no fault of the pigs.

At this season of the year a dry shelter should be provided for the sheep.

If there were fewer whips in the world there would be fewer ugly horses.

If the pigs are uneasy and squealing there is something wrong. Find out what it is.

Look after the sheep's feet once in awhile. They are apt to grow long and bothersome.

HANDLING BREEDING EWES IN COLD WEATHER

It is very important that the ewes of the flock be put in proper condition before lambing time, as otherwise the farmer or breeder can expect only a small percentage of lambs. There are two conditions that may result in the raising of a small percentage of lambs. First, many people have the impression that the ewes can be kept throughout the year on coarse, rough feeds with no grain except perhaps a small amount after lambing. The result is that the ewes, being thin at lambing time, produce weak lambs and do not produce enough milk to keep the lamb alive for the first few days. The second condition, in which the ewes are too fat, is far less common, but does occur. If the ewes have had the run of a good pasture during the summer they may be in very high condition in early winter. Then if rather heavy grain feeding is started early the ewes may become too fat for best results. In any flock of great size there is always much individual variation in the tendency of the ewes to put on fat. For this reason it is often advisable to divide the flock, putting the fatter ewes together and feeding them rather light until near lambing time. The ewes thin in condition should be fed enough to bring them to good breeding condition before lambing.

If the ewes are in good breeding condition in the fall and a good quality of roughage is fed no grain need be given until about three or four weeks before the beginning of the lambing season. The grain then given should consist of feeds that favor a good milk flow, as oats or bran. A mixture of the two should prove very satisfactory. Up to the time of lambing only about one-half to three-quarters of a pound per day need be fed.

After the lambing period the amount should be increased somewhat. The proper amount to feed then would depend on the size of the ewes, the percentage of lambs and other factors.

The question of roughage for ewes is a very important one. Alfalfa and clover hay are almost essential if the very best results are to be obtained. Very coarse fibrous hays, especially timothy, have been shown to be very objectionable as a roughage for pregnant ewes. Some form of succulent feed, as roots or corn silage, can be used to very great advantage if the cost is not prohibitive.

The feeding should not be the only consideration in the management of the flock, but the question of shelter and exercise are equally important. Close housing not only is not essential, but should be guarded against, and instead a more open house or shed should be provided. Warmth of the house is not an important consideration, for if kept dry the sheep's fleece will serve to keep the body warm. Care should be taken that the sheep do not have to stand around in damp, muddy places.—C. V. Singleton, Idaho Experiment Station.

Tankage For Pigs.

Tankage affords a splendid feed in connection with corn and when fed at the rate of one pound of tankage to eight to twelve pounds of corn will produce gains more economically than when corn is fed without the tankage. If tankage is not available shorts with a little oil meal will be a splendid fattening ration. Farmers feeding herds of forty to fifty shotes should remember to feed proportionately. A herd of fifty pigs will consume ten times as much as a litter of five, and feed should be given accordingly. Many farmers fail to realize this fact and do not give the hogs a sufficient amount to produce the gains that should be desired. When hogs attain a weight of 150 to 175 pounds they should be given all they will eat, for the faster they gain at this age the more profitable will be the gains.

Parasites In Sheep.

Sheep should have access to medicated salt in winter just as methodically as in summer, for in this way the breeding parasites that winter in the stomachs of mature sheep are largely destroyed. The source of drinking water for sheep is under the entire control of the feeder while the sheep are in dry lot, thus making it impossible for them to imbibe parasites with water, which in summer is very common. It is supposed that the parasite known as stomach worm survives the winter in the open field to some extent. Therefore the farmer who would keep his farm as free as possible from parasites should by all means use the winter season in systematically eradicating the parasites in the flock itself.

Sun Always Shining on America.

It is not only on the British empire that the sun never sets. It never sets on American soil. When it is 6 p. m. at Atto Island, Alaska, it is 9:36 a. m. the next day on the eastern coast of Maine.

COSTLY INFIELD OF THE CHICAGO CUBS

Four Players Manager Tinker Has Selected for His Infield for Coming Season.

Manager Joe Tinker's infield will be one of the highest, if not the highest, paid combinations playing ball. The club manager has collected for his inner defense players who profited greatly by the baseball war. It is looked upon as the best-balanced infield in the National league and the strongest the club has had since the days of Steinfeldt, Tinker, Evers and Chance.

Heinie Zimmermann draws the biggest salary check of the infield. Vic Saier is next. Steve Yerkes third and Mike Doolan fourth. Not one of the quartet gets less than $5,000 a year. The total amount is $22,300.

STORY OF COLUMBIA COACH

Jim Rice, the Columbia university rowing coach, is telling a good story on himself these days. Rice has been endeavoring to arouse greater enthusiasm for rowing at Columbia and to down the report that he is about to quit because he can't get enough candidates to report for the crews.

"I went up to a big freshman and asked him why didn't he come out for the crew," said Rice.

"'What's the use?' he said. 'Haven't you heard the stories? Rice is going to leave.'

"'Leave? Who told you?'

"'Why, I got it from Rice direct.'"

Job for Trainer Hart.

Fred Hart, former Cub trainer, has accepted a similar position with the Brooklyn team of the National league.

SOCIETY NOTES.

The largest crowd that has ever attended a dance at Griffiths's Hall is expected to be present this evening at the dance to be given under the auspices of the Blue Ribbon Club of this city. An attractive program has been arranged.

The Thursday Night Pinochle Club met at the home of Robert Payne on John street this week. A. R. Pardee proved to be the best shark of the evening and was awarded first prize, the consolation prize being awarded to Theodore Wood. Hills, who is just learning the intricacies of the game, nearly robbed Mr. Pardee of the honors by his good playing.

The Misses Bessie House and Rachel Hoffman delightfully entertained a number of their friends at a private dance in Odd Fellows' Hall, Ulster Park, on Friday evening. The evening was thoroughly enjoyed by the forty couples present and at a late hour the guests departed declaring the hostesses royal entertainers. During the evening refreshments were served and a general good time enjoyed. A numbr of guests were present from Kingston, Brooklyn, Esopus and other nearby places.

Henrietta Wynkoop Guild.

The Henrietta Wynkoop Guild of the First Dutch Church will hold their regular meeting at the home of Mrs. Caroline Holmes, No. 208 Albany avenue, on Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Delightfully Surprised.

Friday evening a number of school chums of Miss Helen Brodhead most delightfully surprised her at the home of her sister, Mrs. James C. Legg, of 50 Hunter street. During the evening piano selections were rendered by Miss Mildred Messinger, Miss Gertrude Eberson and the hostess, Miss Brodhead. Some of the most popular pieces were also played on the Victrola. Dancing, games and other amusements were indulged in. Dainty refreshments were served.

Enjoyable Dance.

St. John's parish house presented a very attractive appearance last evening for the "As You Like It" dance given by the young ladies of the Kijkuit Club. American flags and handsome college pennants which the girls loaned for the occasion, were artistically arranged. The dance, which was an enjoyable affair, was chaperoned by Miss Helena Clearwater of the club, Mrs. Albert Hart and Mrs. Brigham. It is thought that a neat sum was realized for charitable work.

He was removed to his home on the Ridge road from where the funeral will be held at 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon. George Waring Hendricks died at his home in New Jersey on Thursday morning, and the remains were brought to Saugerties for interment today. He was a brother-in-law of Miss Rachel and William Decker, and a cousin of Howard Hendricks of this city. He was an Ulster county boy, having been born here in 1839. He was a son of Benjamin Hendricks, who ran the old steamer Norwich as captain in 1846 when she was plying between Rondout and New York as a night passenger boat. He was a nephew of the late Col. J. T. Hendricks, who was the superintendent of the Delaware & Hudson Canal at the Rondout terminal for many years, and later supervisor of the old town of Kingston. The family soon after moved to the old Waring homestead in the town of Lloyd, where Mr. Hendricks lived for many years, teaching the district school and music in that section. Later they moved to Hoboken, N. J., when Mr. Hendricks engaged in business in New York for a time successfully. He was a devoted Christian man and active in the Methodist Church all his life. For a time he was an occasional correspondent of the Kingston Argus and the Kingston Leader. During the early half of his life he was an inveterate user of tobacco in every form. While living in Hoboken he gave up this habit absolutely in a single night, attributing this achievement to prayer. In speaking of this he said while visiting a prominent Methodist family of his acquaintance there one evening the lady said to him, "George, why don't you give up this filthy tobacco habit? Do you know what my little boy says when I tell him he must never learn to smoke or chew tobacco when he grows up? He says, 'Well, Mamma, George does it, you know, and see what a good Christian man he is.' "This," Mr. Hendricks said, "smote me to the heart at once. To think that I was such an example to this young boy. Before I left that house that night I handed over my pipe and tobacco box to this lady and promised her that never again would I smoke or chew tobacco. I went home, and before going to bed I knelt down and asked the Lord to help me keep this resolution. And from that day to this I have never touched tobacco and I now hate the smell of it." This story was published in the New York Tribune at the time under a sarcastic headline which was widely copied in the press, the Brooklyn Eagle devoting an editorial to the item, all in a facetious vein. But the story was absolutely true, and Mr. Hendricks died a hater of tobacco.

Alaska's Natural Submarines.

The channels of the Alaskan waterways vary as you sail on to the northward. Now they widen into great lakes; now they are rivers as narrow as the Hudson or Rhine. At times you pass through gorges walled by islands and the mainland, and at times you are in fiords like those formed by the half sunken Andes along western Patagonia, near the strait of Magellan. This part of our territory is made up of the heads of submerged mountains, and in places there are great rocks as steep, as high and as sharp as the Washington monument, which come within twenty or thirty feet of the surface. These are terrible pinnacle rocks that rip open the hulls of the steamers. They are searched for and marked with buoys by the wire drag of our coast and geodetic survey.—Christian Herald.

Canny Human Skill.

The ocean comes up and smashes our beaches and our piers; the wind blows down old houses and walls and trees; the rain fills up creek beds and basements and comes up over the floors of stores, with some damage to silks and sugar. It is all very big and scary and horrendous, but still the puny human climbs quietly into his dry street car, the antlike commuter crawls aboard his chip sized ferryboat, the steamer swings and dances through the typhoon, and the cigar box office building laughs at the racket and the fuss. There is skill behind the car, the boat, the building; canny human skill that keeps cool and is not to be bluffed even by the winds and waters of the earth, and nature may lose its temper all it wants; it loses it quite fruitlessly.—San Francisco Bulletin.

Resonance of Jade.

The remarkable resonance of jade is a peculiar quality, which gives it great importance in Chinese estimation; to such an extent that "singers' chimes" of twenty-four different pieces and tones were sometimes constructed. Occasional use is also made of the natural form of the jade bowlders, which are found in river beds.

The Pharos lighthouse, built in 283 B. C., during the reign of Ptolemy Philadelphus of Alexandria, when finished bore the legend: "King Ptolemy to the gods, the saviors, for the benefit of sailors," which presently crumbled off, having been formed in mortar by the builder Sostrates, and beneath, carved in the rock itself, appeared the following: "Sostrates the Cnidian, son of Dexiphanes, to the gods, the saviors, etc.

To Cover Scratches.

Equal parts of cider vinegar, turpentine and linseed oil. Put the three in a bottle, shake well, and it is ready for use. It may be kept for any length of time. This is fine to use on varnished floors; it keeps them glossy and preserves the varnish.

The Suicide Age.

Farm and Garden

THE FARM WOOD LOT.

Forest Culture Is an Art the Farmer Should Cultivate.

Forest culture is as much of an art as is corn culture. A good wood lot, like a good cornfield, is the result of applying intelligent methods to produce a full, valuable crop. A cornfield with fail spots, empty hills, feeble stalks and half filled ears is neither a credit to the farm nor a paying investment for the farmer. No more is a wood lot half stocked with inferior trees. When timber is cut is the time of all times to apply forestry. The way in which the cutting is done will determine what the subsequent condition of the wood lot will be.

There is a difference between farm woodland and the farm wood lot. Farm woodland is farm land which has not yet been cleared. Farm wood lot is a term which might best be used to mean a part of a farm permanently devoted to timber production, under a sound plan of farm management. The size and the location of the wood lot will depend upon various considerations, of which the most important are the home needs of the farm, the character of the land and the present and prospective market for materials from the wood lot.

SIMPLE WAY TO TEST SOILS.

Many Farmers Waste Years Trying to Farm Sour Lands.

Buy a few cents' worth of hydrochloric acid, also litmus paper at the druggist's. Then test the various soils on your farm. With a spade or large augur take a soil sample to a depth of seven inches; mixing it well, writes L. C. Leit in the Orange Judd Farmer.

Now, with a handful of this moist sample make a saucer shaped form. Pour in a little of the acid, being careful not to drop any on your hands or clothes, as it burns. If the result is quite free bubbling or effervescence it shows that the soil contains considerable limestone, but little or no foaming indicates deficiency of lime. Make this test with soil known to be rich in lime or with a sample to which you have added lime, then with soil poor in lime and you will see the difference distinctly. Now, make a ball of moist earth from another handful of the same sample of soil, break it in two, lay on one part a bit of the blue litmus paper, leave for a few moments, then open the ball again. If the blue paper has turned red the soil is sour or acid and probably quite deficient in lime. If it keeps red after drying the soil is very sour. If the blue paper does not change color then test the soil moisture with red litmus paper. If it turns blue the soil is alkali and not sour.

No amount of reading or talking will teach you half as much as for you to make these tests yourself. Many farmers waste years trying to farm sour land or that poor in lime, whereas by testing it in this easy way they can see at once what it needs.

POULTRY IN WINTER.

Look out for sudden severe spells. See that the henhouse is closed tight when a norther shows its nose.

One cold night is sufficient to freeze the combs of all your fowls and spoil them for the show at which you intended to exhibit them.

It avails nothing to bewail the fact that the poultry house doors were not closed the night of the storm after the damage has been done. Shutting the doors before the storm comes is what counts.

Success in poultry culture is simply the result of looking after all the little details connected with the business. Any one can be successful if he will use a little diligence and common sense.

A hot mash on a cold winter morning is a good thing to give the chickens. Still, it is not wise to give them all they will eat of the mash, for if you do they will be apt to sit around after they are filled and become chilled with inactivity. On the contrary, give them about half a feed of mash and scatter small grain in the litter, so that they may be kept warm by scratching for the seeds. This will keep them active and healthy and consequently profitable.

MENKE'S DAILY SPORTING LETTER

(By Frank G. Menke.)

In days of old when fighters bold,
Were filled with battle-lust;
They never sought nor had a thought
Of gathering the dust.
But in these days the fighters' ways
Have changed from times of old,
And they won't scrap a single tap
Unless for tons of gold.

Much Depends on Fight.

The Moran-Willard fight on the 25th either will make or permanently break the fighting game in the New York district.

The Gothamites have stood for so much in the way of pugilistic burlesque that they have reached the limit of their endurance powers. They are groggy. If the heavyweight battle proves to be a fiasco, it will be a knockout blow.

But should that affair develop into a real battle from the beginning to the end it will revive the game here. The public wants—but hardly dares hope for—a slam-bang battle with action every minute of the way. It wants a battle of the old kind—free hitting, fierce rushing—and no stalling.

If Moran and Willard fight that way, they'll act as saviours of the game here. If they don't, they'll act as its executioners.

Willard's Deceptive Weight.

The folks here find it hard to believe that Jess Willard beams only 272½ pounds, fully garbed, at the present time. That was the figure announced after the champion had been weighed in secretly.

"That boxing commission ain't got no reason for cheating 10 or 20 pounds in Willard's weight, but, by golly, I'd bet my next week's salary of $18 that Willard weighs over 275 stripped," piped up one of the "regulars" at Willard's training camp in the Pioneer A. C.

Looking at Willard from the waist up, it certainly does seem that he carries more than the 265 pounds at which is credited to him—but then look at Willard's legs. There's your answer. If his pedals were proportionately as huge as his torso, the champion surely would weigh around 275 in fighting condition. But his legs, especially the lower part of them, are quite slim for so huge a man.

Willard's pins are thinner than those of Jack Johnson, and thinner than those of most heavyweights in the game. But they weren't that way always. Once upon a time they were fat and quite flabby. That made Willard as clumsy as a sea-sick Swede. But in the past year he has been paying a lot of attention to those legs, and has reduced them to skin and bone and muscle.

Sparring Partners Too Gentle.

The heavyweight king would make a hit with the crowd that watch him in his daily workouts if he annexed a new sparring partner, one who wasn't quite as gentle as Jack Hempole and Walter Monohan.

Both men worked with him during the long grind preliminary to his layoff bout. Willard, through constant sparring with them, has come to know just how they hit—and with they've got. Their shifts and swings are an open book to him, and because of this they don't give him as much of an argument as the fans would like to see.

Furthermore, both men are careful not to wound the champion. They slam him and they bang him—but they never put real force behind their swings, even though they use gloves so heavily padded they are almost as soft as pillows.

Black and white and novelty checks hold a popular place among the smart materials of the season. They are used often in the street and semi-tailored suits, proving not only attractive but also practical. One very distinctive suit developed in this checked material was relieved by a touch of rose faille silk. The skirt is gored and very wide. The Directoire collar of self material is new and smart in that it may roll softly away from the throat, or lay flat.

Bids on Bridge in April.

Indications would seem to point to the fact that the work of building the bridge across the Rondout creek will really be started this year. A local contractor, who was in Albany recently, said that he learned that the state highway department expected to include the work of building the bridge in the spring lettings and that bids would be asked some time in April.

HUB PERDUE HAS GONE

Passing of Baseball Comedian and Pitcher Is Regretted.

True Son of Dixie and Born to Bask in Warmth of Sunshine—Probably Worst Batter in Game and the Best Story Teller.

The passing of Hub Perdue, who has forsaken the baseball arena to assume charge of his property in Texas is regretted by fan and player alike. Hub is a true son of Dixie, born to bask in the warmth of the sunshine, and it was the great misfortune of his life that he was forced to spend the greater portion of his major league career as a member of the Braves in cold, bleak Boston.

Hub is no less famous for his ability to tell a good story than he is for his strength in the pitcher's box or his ludicrous weakness at the plate. Perdue was probably the worst batter in the history of baseball, and the best story teller. Here is a yarn spun by Hub at the time of his transfer from the Braves, then a joke aggregation, to the St. Louis Cards.

"Sah, I done heard a gentleman remark as how these yere Braves were a fighting team. Huh! Why the only thing I ever saw 'um fight was the ball. Yas, sah, dat's so. I'm jus' a'gwine to tell you all that they was ferocious like an oyster. Suttenly they was the perlitest lot of ball players I ever see.

"One day down yonder in Pittsburgh I was a'-pitching my head off and the sco' was 5 to 2 agin us. Come our half of the seventh and the fust three batters get on. It was my turn to hit, and I figures I'm due cause I ain't had no hit since the spring befo'. I went a'-running fo' my bat and, man alive, I seed I'd jus' about make a home run and be a hero. I gits my war club and starts fo' the plate when I detects the Pittsburgh players caming in, an' all a-laughin'.

"Yas, sah. Dog my cats if ever one of those base runners hadn't done gone and let those Pittsburgh fellows push 'um offen the bags and tag 'um out. And worser still, everyone that was ketched was 'pologizing for bein' in the way an' interfering."

She Is Always to Blame.

Of what use is it discussing whether men or women will do the sillier things to maintain a pose? We all know—or ought to, perhaps—that when the woman buys a twelve dollar pair of white kid boots that are unsuitable to wear with anything else that she can afford she is herself to blame; and when a man mortgages his farm to buy an automobile that he cannot afford to run it is the women of the family who are to blame; and there you are!—"As She Sees It," in Lowell Courier-Citizen.

Submarine Wonders of Hawaii.

Nowhere in this wide world are there such rainbow fish as in Hawaii, of every color and shade and hue. If there is any tint or grandeur of tints in the prism that is not reflected in the scales of the finny tribes in the waters around the islands I should like to see it. A visit to the Honolulu aquarium (far superior as it is to the world famous one in Naples), or to the Coral gardens, where we see the fish through a glass bottomed boat, disporting themselves in their own front yards, so to speak, is well worth while.—Christian Herald.

Gissing Blessed the Piano.

Bismarck's love of noise was shared by George Gissing. He found "five finger exercises" played on a neighbor's piano, "prayerful and helpful" when at his desk and said: "Even the street organs put me in a happy mood. I owe many a page to them—written when I should else have been sunk in bilious gloom."—London Standard.
